Leibert wore a sand beige striped wool skirt with a beige short-sleeve cashmere sweater. A strip of narrow tweed laced through the collar. Over that she wore a sand beige short leather jacket.

Revealing the new Dutch boy silhouette was the ensemble worn by Mrs. Conely. The navy sheer had a white pique collar, a tiny navy and white candy striped bow and a button jacket lined with the same fabric.

A PETER pan collar with pearl button trim added sparkle to the yellow linen sheath worn by Mrs. Chambers.

Smart for the season was a strapless organza frock printed in lavender, turquoise, and green leaves. Of interest were the detachable puff sleeves and a royal blue satin cummerbund.

Another frock adding spark was the lipstick red nylon organza with a bodice draped into a soft cowl neckline and a skirt of knife-pleats. With this went a red satin evening bag with red beaded embroidery.

A bright classic for the morning shopper was a white cotton shirtwaist in pink and soft green stripes with unpressed pleated skirt and long sleeves.

To start your spring on a gay note was a pale blue cotton of nubby texture modeled by Mrs. Glosey. Pearls and rhinestones were scattered on the bodice and two bows tied at the v-neck.

Fashions love the matronly woman too. Shown among the larger sizes was a slate blue tweed, single-breasted jacket dress, so complimentary to the figure. Detailing was added by a notched collar, lone buttons and a belt.

WINDING up the show was a full skirted black frock with spaghetti strap "see thru" trim at the base of the neck. Topping this was a beige bolero with jet buttons and a large black bow.

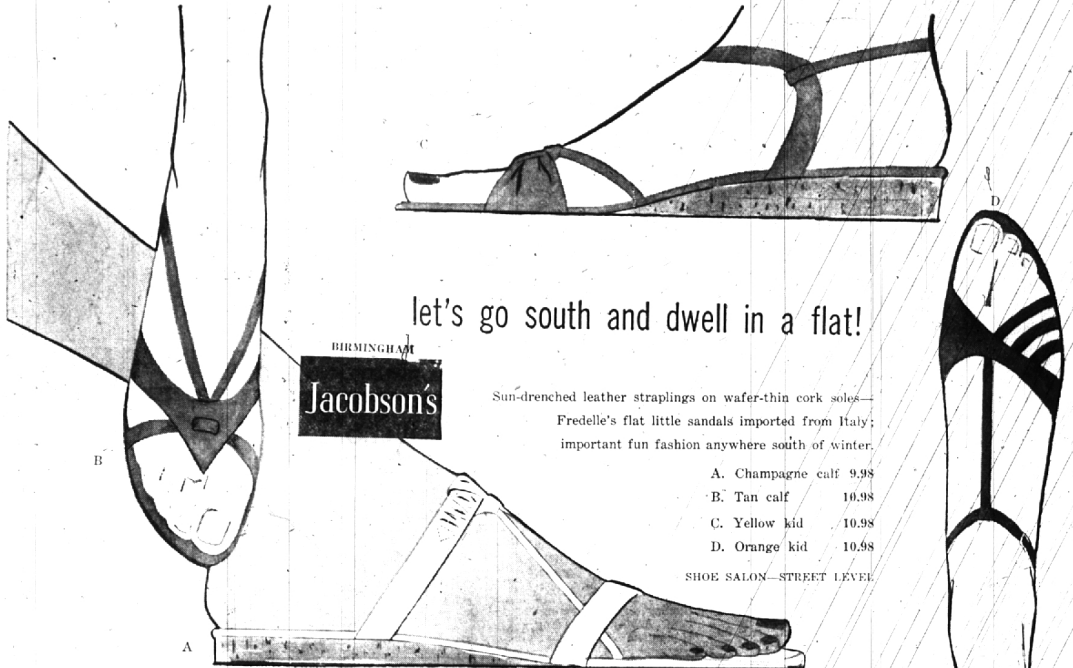

Mrs. T. A. Chick, social chairman for the year, was assisted by members of her standing committee, Mrs. S. J. Sabourin, Mrs. William Evans and Mrs. R. S. Knecht.

be given Feb. 1 by the Birmingham Wellesley club.
