Football league will start games Saturday.
BLOOMFIELD TOWNSHIP—Builders in the township area failed in their attempt to get the township board to rescind a resolution requiring new home builders to pay a $200 sewer-tap-in fee in a lump sum. Builders had wanted to have the amount pro-rated over a ten-year period.
Pecy Hills chapter of the DAR of Birmingham made plans to hold a four-day antique show at Birmingham Community House.

Issue of Sept. 28
 Record number of volunteers prepared for a United Foundation Torch Drive to raise $21,196, largest quota ever set for the Birmingham-Bloomfield-Franklin areas.
Bloomfield Hills' first service club for business and professional men, the Bloomfield Lions club, began luncheon meetings at the Kingsley Inn. Robert J. Stadler, Bloomfield Hills city clerk, was elected president of the new group.
Two new Lutheran parishes in the Birmingham area were announced. Rev. Ronald F. Fuller, missionary of the United Lutheran church, is organizing a congregation in a Bloomfield township area west of Birmingham. Rev. H. J. Kuhlmann is holding services in a newly completed parsonage on Whitmore road, Bloomfield Hills. The parsonage is located near the site of the proposed American Lutheran church mission of Detroit's Grace Lutheran church.
SOUTHFIELD—Southfield Township Supervisor Eugene Swem warned that private enterprise may leave Birmingham-area communities behind if those communities do not make some decision on disposal of sewage.
Dr. Orren Mohler, of 540 Southfield, Birmingham, reported on his recent visit to Russia on the invitation of the Russian Academy of Sciences. The noted astronomer, assistant director of the McMath-Hulbert observatory of the University of Michigan, reported on his important solar research to Russian astronomers.
