

'Live Music Is Best'--

According to the slogan on Howard Harrington's handkerchief, Manager of the Detroit Symphony, Mr. Harrington addressed the "committee of one hundred" at an afternoon tea and gave a brief resume of the performances for the coming season. Mrs. Max Fruhauf (right) was hostess for the day and Mrs. Frank W. Coolidge, chairman of the committee, remarked "The slogan is very fitting for the occasion."

Symphony 'Dream Committee' Dedicates Work to Matinees

"The committee of one hundred" . . . that unique group dedicated to the firm establishment of the Detroit Symphony orchestra Friday matinees, staged one of its rare meetings Tuesday at an afternoon tea in the Bloomfield Hills home of Mrs. Max Fruhauf on Brookside.

Mrs. Frank W. Coolidge, chairman of the committee which last year sold a thousand season tickets for matinees, challenged her members afresh with a goal of 600 new subscribers. Each committee member selling five may choose a school to receive a scholarship season ticket.

buffet will be open before each concert in the Ford auditorium social lounge and music appreciation lectures by prominent musicologists will precede each program.

Mrs. Coolidge's "dream committee" contains only experienced and diligent workers who know how to get things done. They will work throughout the summer without supervision, meeting only once again in September for a "Victory" luncheon.

To make matinees even more attractive to busy suburban women, the orchestra will offer subscribers for the first time season ticket parking in the auditorium garage.

William T. Sweeney, Birmingham high school, will be among the thirty-nine teachers from six states who will attend the 1957 General Motors summer conference for high school science teachers at GM Technical center, Aug. 18-24.

During the program at Technical Center, the high school educators will witness laboratory experiments and engineering demonstrations at headquarters of Research Staff, Engineering Staff and Process Development Staff—all illustrating an application of science and mathematics.

Whoops! Mrs. Sales' nearly forgot her hats!

Her NEW hats, we mean. (Obviously the smart one she's wearing is on her head!) Also, the little straws she picked up on sale have been delivered to her long since. The hats she is on her way into the store for today are the ADVANCE Fall hats she always chooses at this time of year to add that up-to-the-minute look to the smart fashion she has bought "on sale."

You see, our expert "sales-shopper," "Mrs. Sales" realizes that the freshest, most "current" accessories possible make dresses and suits look their most fashionable and perfect for the season in which they are to be worn. We realize it, too, and make a point of accompanying our "sales seasons" with plenty of very new accessory merchandise.

Something in "Mrs. Sales" expression this morning makes us think that she may well have more in mind than just her new accessories. We know that she is already completely outfitted from our current sale, but there's a raincoat she's been looking at AND a little black dinner dress that caught her eye! Knowing "Mrs. S." we rather imagine that she'll just step into a fitting room and try on a few more things before she goes back home today. "Mrs. Sales" knows that it is at this time in an annual Sale when the most drastic reductions are made and she can look for "extra" things. "Mrs. S." is smart so many ways!
