Local Ceramists Win 11 Awards At Chicago Show

At a recent Great Lakes Ceramic hobby show in Chicago, several Birmingham residents, all pupils of Adele Davis, 630 Landon, Birmingham, won 11 awards for entries in a number of categories.

from six other states. Mrs. Robert Plew, 692 Brookside, won a first prize for an underglaze table top displaying a family genealogy. Another of her entries won a second prize. Her 10-year-old daughter, Karen, received two honorable mentions. Jeannette Barzinni received a first prize for a mosaic coffee table.

A club of young neighborhood girls—the Helping Hand Club—will put on a back-yard fair Saturday at the home of the club's president, 10-year-old Pam Rison, with proceeds going to the March of Dimes. Pam is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Rison, 31229 Pines, and the Rison back-yard will be transformed into a fairground complete with fish pond, spook house and toy and book sales.

A little girl stood before an audience of over 2,000 people last Wednesday night and sang "The Lord's Prayer" with a beautiful soprano voice that sent a ripple of excitement through the crowd. She is 11-year-old Linda Ball, fifth grader at Beverly school, whose Principal Malcolm Ferguson reveals the astounding fact that Linda has never had a voice lesson. Only a few suggestions from Beverly music teacher Alma Fassbender. Her unscheduled appearance last week came after School Music Director Arnold W. Berndt happened to hear her sing at Beverly school a few days before, decided she would be on the all-city music program at the high school. Linda's parents, the Donald Balls, 19148 Beverly road, plan to seek vocal training for her since her lovely voice has been "discovered".

FLAG DAY IS COMING UP, reminds the Birmingham Junior Chamber of Commerce, which has rained out when it scheduled flag sales on two successive Saturdays last month. Now the flags are at the Wine shop on Pierce street, where they're "up to here" in flags. Says JC member Al Firth, they're 3 x 5 flags, with six-foot jointed pole, a good buy at $3.50. Stop in or call Dick Mestach, so the Jaycee's can use your money for their work with youth. As Firth says, "We can't buy anything for the kids with flags!"

Only a lack of messenger cable is delaying the final step in the installation of traffic signals at the Oakland intersection, according to Floyd Harp, electrician for the Oakland county road commission. Poles for the signals have been set and grounds are in, according to Harp. Only the delay in receiving the cable is holding up placing the traffic lights in operation—and that could come today—or a week from today, he reports. The intersection has been the site of numerous serious accidents because of a blind spot.

A terrified youngster who had lost her family was led across the Birmingham high school gymnasium last Wednesday night in the huge crowd which gathered there for the all-city music festival. Over the loud speaker, Arnold W. Berndt asked, "Does anyone claim this youngster?" Hundreds watched her expression change to relief when her mother responded. She is Jackie Kachadurian, 8, whose brother had told her to wait by the door for a minute. Jackie got impatient and wandered away to look for her mother, which she was doing when a janitor found her.

"A suspicious ice cream salesman is selling under the name of Birmingham Lions," reported a Pilgrim avenue resident to Birmingham police last Thursday. Police raced to the scene, halted the car the resident described as belonging to the suspicious salesman, and third-greer him. He turned out to be Birmingham Lions' retiring President Hal P. Buerge. In the car with him was Donald Cummings, Lions first vice president, who becomes president next week. The two were delivering ice cream which had been ordered by women. The sale was for a benefit for their fund for work with the blind and young people.

MOST STOPFUL, personable and talented girl in the Birmingham-Bloomfield-Franklin region is being sought as a candidate for Miss Torch of 1957. The metro area's all-city music festival. Over the loud speaker, Arnold W. Berndt asked, "Does anyone claim this youngster?" Hundreds watched her expression change to relief when her mother responded. She is Jackie Kachadurian, 8, whose brother had told her to wait by the door for a minute. Jackie got impatient and wandered away to look for her mother, which she was doing when a janitor found her.

THERE'S NO WAY the city can legislate against willow trees, Birmingham city commission affirmed Monday night. They were discussing a letter from a woman resident on S. Bates street who said she had just paid $580 to have a new sewer service installed. It was of cast iron, into which the tree (in the neighboring yard) could not send its roots.

VISITORS TO BLOOMFIELD HILLS office of MacManus, John & Adams now can combine business with pleasure. If callers arrive a bit early for an appointment, or after coming to their business, they can take a five-mile scenic tour of the Bloomfield area in a brand new '57 Pontiac, complete with a special map. MJA President Ernie Jones got the idea, and the car was supplied by (who else?) than a long-time client, Pontiac Motor division.

BIRMINGHAM RESIDENTS plagued with the annual problem of stray dogs might take a tip from the "land-down-under". Australia. Seems a wire mesh fence—a fantastic 3,500 miles long—starting six inches below ground and rising 6 feet 3-inches high is now complete around 300,000 square miles of the state of Queensland. The fence will cost more than a million dollars but will save many times that in sheep and cattle killed each year by the wild dogs, or dingoes, in Australia. The dogs, which run in packs, number tens of thousands in the region. A similar fence is proposed for another section of Australia. An "iron curtain" around Birmingham, maybe?

BIRMINGHAM'S DISTINGUISHED ARTIST, Robert A. Herzberg, is on his way to Europe again. This time he'll be painting in the city of Bremen, Germany. Herzberg, who is on his way to Bremerhaven, Germany.

"TO OFFER stimulating skills" is the purpose of Kingwood's summer school's brochure. Describing it. The six-week session offers courses for fun, not for credit. Some of the subjects are creative writing, developmental reading, to improve reading skill and rate) and current international politics, including the personalities as well as the problems.
