

SOUTHFIELD HI NOTES

Students walking into physics class last week found the following announcement written on the board:
90 minute examination Friday
This is your life.
You asked for it!

That reminded last year's chemistry students of the day last year when they found Buerman Brewbaker's note on the board. He had printed out the word "laboratory" and under it had written, "Let's do the first five letters, and not practice the last seven."

Last Thursday Southfield's talent assembly was a complete success. Ed Ward acted as the emcee, taking the part of a disc jockey. Soupy's brother, Chili Sales, Ed wore a big black and white checked bow tie, and sat on a high stool. He held about the lady who was on television. Apparently she got her face washed and after drying it with a clean towel, they told her that she was "Clean for a day." Some of the acts were dedicated to members of the audience, such as Ronnie Mytty, Donnie Martin, Lesmie Lamb and Bobby Benson, all football players.

Southfield seniors are keeping their fingers crossed. They hope the swimming pool will be finished before graduation. Promised the first "dip" in the pool, they want to plan a swimming party. The middle of May has been set as the deadline for completion.

Senior class officers were taken in for a look at the pool last week. On the way, Gary Evans remarked that if there was water in it, he felt like going for a swim. As they viewed the pool for the first time, there stood a man on the bottom, hosing down the cement floor, apparently so that it wouldn't dry too soon. The others chided Gary about his eagerness to dive in "if there is any water in it."

The officers saw the new Whirlpool bath, purchased by the Varsity club, Key club and student council.

During those warm sunny days last week, it was hard for students to concentrate on school. It took a lot of will power to come back to school after lunch and not to go for a ride in the country. "If it's like this now," say the teachers, "what will it be like when spring really comes?"

The senior class has been thinking seriously on a class motto, colors and flower recently. Many suggestions have been made, and the final tabulations will be made this week.

Last week 12 senior girls took a field trip in connection with their sociology classes to a crime laboratory. The girls learned much about the Detroit police department, saw many interesting and educational departments of the police.

While Lois Mattson was reading through her English literature recently, she came across a picture from Hamlet, showing the king appointing his son. A penciled inscription, composed the previous year by an English student, read, "My son, you have drafted!"

Cloth Patches To Be Tickets For 'Patch Match'

If you purchase a ticket for the Junior class dance to be held at Southfield high school Friday evening from 8 to 11 p.m., you can just pin it on, for the tickets will be patches of cloth. Based on the Sadie Hawkins' day theme, the dance has been named "Patch Match."

A girl-bid record dance, preparations are being handled by an all-girl committee. Sharon Bradley is in charge of entertainment. Connie Wardle and Bev Kochan have

Water Ballerinas At BHS Get Ready To Go 'Shopping'

Swimmers will go on a synchronized "Shopping Spree" April 11, 12 and 13, when 80 Birmingham high school girls perform in a water ballet at the new Derby junior high school pool.

At 7:30 p.m. Thursday and 8 Friday and Saturday, the girls will turn the pool into a make-believe department store, using one of the pool's large window walls as the store window.

Co-directors are girls' physical education instructors Judy Stevenson and Sally Reid.

been doing the publicity. Dana Douglas came up with the clever patch-ticket idea. Decorations are being prepared by Judy Bryson and Arlene Mikovitz. Judy Labris is in charge of refreshments.
