

Southfield High Notes

By MARGARET GRAY

Well, report cards found they had few friends last week. Once again they made their appearance, and that was the time seniors decided graduation couldn't come soon enough.

Speaking of seniors, lately they have been kept busy writing out a class will. They selected for their motto, "It matters not how long we live, but how."

Someone from the journalism class has reported that the Davy Crockett craze hasn't left Southfield. Eleanor Hill was seen recently sporting a cowboy cap!

Last Friday Southfield's forensic winners attended the district tournament at Walled Lake. Other schools attending were Waterford and Farmington.

While coming home from Walled Lake after the forensic contest, four girls bet Gary Evans a total of 58 cents that he couldn't put a cupcake into his mouth all at once and chew it.

Last week, Don Majuz and Ron Myty were playing with the large compass used for drawing circles on the physics room board.

Southfield's future teachers club took 15 small orphan children down to the Art Institute puppet show Saturday. They packed lunches, and presented each child with a yellow yarn octopus which they had made the previous week.

Kingswood Plans Summer Session

CRANBROOK—A slate of talented instructors for Kingswood summer school has been announced by assistant headmistress Grace Fry.

CREATIVE WRITING and pre-college composition will be taught by Elizabeth Bennett, former instructor of English at Wayne University, now head of the English department at Kingswood.

Other instructors for the summer session will include Mrs. A. Sweetman Smith of Kingswood teaching Spanish conversation, and Mrs. Margaret Hoffman from the International Institute of Detroit, who will conduct a class in French conversation.
