ONE THING WE REALLY TRY TO DO

We try to sell records that are in new condition. We know fingerprints leave smudges of corrosive acid and abrasive dust-collecting oils on record grooves. So all our records are stored safely away in protective sleeves. Here they don't tempt curious, dangerous fingertips. Also, our records are not pulled out of the scratchy cardboard albums time after time. Watch our trained people; notice they handle a record by its edges—never touch the grooves. That's why our albums are displayed—empty.

We display our empty albums in racks designed especially for a few covers. Not bins or boxes stacked a hundred deep. Each is covered with our own polyethylene bag, no matter how often it is thumbed over, it is never dog-eared or dirty, but is new, sparkling clean new, when it goes home with you. And the protective sleeve goes too, for your future use.

We audit our records on the finest equipment available, played only by a diamond stylus frequently checked on our needle microscope. And notice they are handled and played by our careful, helpful people.

We don't know of any other record store that goes to this effort and expense to assure themselves that the records they sell are NEW records.

These are some of the reasons we feel we have the very best place there is to buy records. Stop in and see if you agree.
