School

(BAUER DEFINED "design capacity" as the ideal of 27 students per classroom. "Crowded" conditions are those not desirable for education, but manageable. "Overcrowding" applies to situations critical to acceptable educational standards.)

"It seems certain, he said, "that some serious modifications will have to be made in the junior high educational program until a new junior-senior high school can be ready by September, 1959. These involve curtailments in art, music, shop and other non-academic subjects."

High school enrollment will be above design capacity a year from this fall, Bauer said, but it will be "manageable" until a new junior-senior high school can be finished.

BECAUSE THERE is immediate need for junior high classrooms, with additional senior high facilities required in two years, the committee recommended a combined school for economy and flexibility. It would have a capacity of 1,500 students and relieve congestion in existing schools.

Construction would be designed for expansion to 2,000-student capacity, thus meeting the higher-grade enrollment need until at least 1961, Bauer said.

"Elementary schools already are overcrowded," he said, "but this will be relieved next fall with the opening of four new schools. If present population trends hold, however, the 14 elementary schools will be moderately crowded by the fall of 1958. Even with the addition of the proposed Westchester school in 1959, enrollments will be above design capacity, but manageable."

Rehabilitation of the structurally sound Baldwin school was recommended as the most prudent way of adding to the city's school capacity. A proposal that the property be sold and the proceeds used to build a new school was rejected by the committee on the basis that more classrooms per dollar would result from rehabilitating the school.

Visitors

Mayor Bugas at his business office. Mayor B. B. B. arrived in Birmingham at 11:30 a.m. an hour later than had been expected, and his tour of the city had to be held in the afternoon instead of the morning as planned. A dinner wrapped up the visit around 9:30 p.m.

Battle Creek's visiting mayor, impressed by the fine residential area in Birmingham, also indicated interest in the city's library, the type of shops and stores in the community and Eton park skating area.

Bloomfield Hills' mayor-pro-tem, Dominick Vetraino, and city manager, Elmer Kephart, journeyed to Auburn for Mayor's Exchange Day. They toured Dow Chemical plants in and around Midland.

Auburn is a town of 869 people, midway between Midland and Bay City.

Both Animals Win

He named his Pet Parade entry "The Tortoise and the Hare," and it won first prize for Johnny Granin Saturday. Despite poor weather, approximately 120 youngsters marched with their pets in the annual event sponsored by the Women's auxiliary of St. James Episcopal church.

Several hundred others attended the carnival after. Second prize went to Kathy and Chrissie Detwiler, third prize to Kathy Laughton.

small. He simply is a professional politician, who depends upon tax monies to develop and hold together a majority of voters who believe in a governmental Santa Claus. Nixon will have to change if he expects to sit in the White House.

It is not money that will bring the poor foreign nations out of their bondage to poverty. . . . It is new and practical social, political and economic IDEAS (laws and truth about them) that will lift an individual or a nation to higher standards of living. Even a moment's thoughtful study of this fact will prove to you why so much of Uncle Sam's foreign aid program has not been effective.

and repair garage at Lincoln and Eton, Birmingham; and $265,000 for contingencies as this construction program is developed.

Brehnan wondered why the present senior high school was built for about $2 million, and the new facility would cost more than twice as much.

Asst. Supt. Richard Featherstone said the present high school, when cost of site, original building, two additions, swimming pool, parking lot, equipment, are figured in, total $3,956,298.76.

RESIDENTS in the Greenfield, 13 Mile area of Southfield township learned why the board couldn't provide bus transportation to the new Greenfield school.

Parents thought this would eliminate traffic hazards of children walking along heavily trafficked roads that had no sidewalks.

The board explained the state set the rules and paid for the district's transportation of children outside municipal limits if they live more than a mile from a school.

"There is little we can do for you unless we set up a total program and gave bus service to everyone in the district, and paid for it by including it in your annual taxes," said Board President Ernest W. Sealhorn.

THE PETITIONERS were advised to contact Greyhound for bus service, as several other subdivisions have obtained.

The 25 regular agenda items included appointment of new teachers, resignations from some others, annual school election boards, tours, and miscellaneous routine business.

Shopping Trip Pays Off

She came all the way from Pontiac to shop in Birmingham stores Friday night, but it was worth the trip for Mrs. Walter Morris, of 6365 Anslow Lane, Pontiac. Here she receives a reward at Lake Jewelers from Arthur Lake, member of the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce's Friday night shopping promotion committee. Mrs. Anslow won $100 in gift certificates, usable at any participating merchant's, as the result of filling out a slip at a local store between 6 and 9 p.m. Friday. Two weeks remain in the Friday night campaign.
