Everybody Helps

Everybody's getting into the act at Barnum junior high school as nearly 300 ninth graders join in the production of three one-act plays. Here painting a mine scene for the play, "Trouble In Tunnel Nine", are (front to back) Bob Elzer, Bob Erickson, Gene Bordinet and Dave Canham. Other students participating in the program of "educational experiences through dramatics" are handling such tasks as making programs and posters, ushering, reyeiding make-up, selling tickets, and, of course, acting. The plays will be presented in the school auditorium tomorrow at 8 p.m.

Scribblers Club has decided to attend a play in Detroit. The club has been studying methods of play writing and technique. Robin Odle, member, gave an interesting talk on theater terms at the last meeting. The play decided upon was "Auntie Mame," which the club will see some weekday in November.

The seniors had a class meeting last week to learn about senior finances.

Parents got a glimpse into the daily lives of their children Thursday night at the PTA open house. They went from class to class, following the schedules of the students.

Nineteen Student Congress representatives attended the Eastern Michigan conference at Hazel Park recently. Delegates were Judy Austin, Dr. Stokes, Martin Weirich, Ann Cope, Punch LeMessurier, Carol Bain, Bob Benson, Sarah Blunt, Lynne Cloonan, Lois Bernitt, Dave Falconer, and Lynn Lopata.

Others were Pete Brink, Sue Little, Ruth Ann Huffman, Tom Fontaine, Julie Hoover, Gibby Slater, and Jeanie Phillips. Mrs. Carol Darling attended as advisor.

At last week's Senate meeting the question of basketball concessions was discussed at great length. It was decided to award the larger part of the concessions to Varsity club, which does so much for the school, especially in the line of athletic equipment.

Birmingham high school biology classes have a standing joke nowadays: Teacher: "How do we catch a rabbit?" Pupil: "Simple, just make a noise like a carrot."

The AFS program for this year was given a grand send-off last week. Parents and students interested in the program or in having a student at their homes met in the Little theater to hear talks by Pete Brink and Betty Nichols. The meeting was very well run.

Last week's pep assembly was sparked by an exhibition given by some "so-called" teachers, led

Hi Notes

Bruce Harlan, who demonstrated diving at the dedication of Southfield's new $400,000 T-shaped pool, is University of Michigan swimming coach. He has won titles in the U.S., England, Holland, Belgium, Ireland, France, Bermuda and North Africa. He won the Olympic springboard championship in 1948 in London and was a champion in the NCAA.

With the sound of drilling and hammering in the air, we know that work has started on the new 17-room addition to Southfield.

Work is underway on the new 1/4 mile track which circles the football field. The project will cost about $22,000.

Monday morning Southfield observed veterans day with a program in the auditorium sponsored jointly by the high school and the Southfield Optimist club. Among the speakers were Eugene Swem, Phillip LaVigne, Arthur Pelletier, Robert E. Hall and Glenn Schoenhalls. Guest speaker for the program was Dr. Guy Hill of the college of education, Michigan State. The program closed with excerpts from the all-school play to be given Friday and Saturday, "Terror at Black Oaks."

Nov. 21 will mark the last evening of teen-age swimming until spring. From this date on the pool will be available on Tuesday evenings only for teen-agers.

terhouse Jug" will be awarded to the student chairman of the winning house at halftime. Following the games a reception will be held in the south lobby of the academic building for those who wish to attend.

Saturday evening the Kingswood senior class will present its annual play.

Dr. Henry Gomberg has given a lecture on the peacetime uses of atomic energy to the Cranbrook science students. Dr. Gomberg is professor of Electrical Engineering and assistant director of the Phoenix project at the University of Michigan.
