Up and Coming Discs:

Last Thursday night on television Johnny Desmond introduced a new tune called KEEP ME IN MIND. This tune has a great set of lyrics, and should make a hit.

Fifty percent of current popular music is rock and roll style. But, the music that is played at dances is the popular music of 10 years ago and earlier.

What will our popular music consist of 10 years from now? Some people think today's music will last for another 10 years, and there are others that feel rock and roll will leave us within the next few years.

Maybe rock and roll is here to stay, but it will never have the lasting appeal of the tunes from the twenties, thirties, and forties that are always requested at dances, and revived by modern artists.

ALBUMS

Roger Williams' album THE FABULOUS FIFTIES and THE FABULOUS FORTIES are two of the best-selling albums locally. Both of these albums contain hits from the last two decades, done up in the ever-popular piano style of Roger Williams.

Hubbard

would shake his tired brains up.

BOWSER TWITCHED his tail several times and then sat up.

How about my being a scare-dog for Farmer Duncan?" Old Mother Hubbard looked at him sadly. "Why, you can't even scare a worm away with your bark, now. The blackbirds would just laugh at you and . . ."

"Please let me try my bark for you," said Bowser weakly. "I haven't tried it out for a week and maybe it's stronger than . . ."

"Try it, my dear doggie," said Old Mother Hubbard, "try it for your own sake."

BOWSER STOOD UP and wagged his tail to get him into action. Then he raised his head and started ahead of him, pretending that there were some blackbirds planning to thief Farmer Duncan's corn. Then he let out a howl and started to creep towards the pretended blackbirds.

"Arf, arf," he barked, but the little bark just wheezed out and slid into a little heap on the floor.

"That'll never do for a bark, will it, Bowser?" asked Old Mother Hubbard, and she began to rock back and forth again.

"Oh, dear," she sighed. "What shall I ever do? I wish I could wish a cupboard full of goodies or go out and seek a fortune like they do in the fairy stories . . ."

"WHAT'S IT, Old Mother Hubbard, that's what we'll do," said Bowser, wagging his tail excitedly. "Let's leave right away and go seek our fortune!"

Old Mother Hubbard looked at Bowser thoughtfully, then she looked out at the high-road that passed her cottage window.

"I think you're right, Bowser," she said happily. "My shoes still are strong and our hearts are stronger! Give me your paw and we'll go look for the pot of gold at the rainbow's edge."

"THAT'LL BE wonderful," cried Bowser, "and then maybe you can steal me some bones in the pot of gold!"

"That's exactly what I'll do and we'll bring all the hogs without bones to live with us." "No cats, though?" reminded Bowser fearfully. "Promise!"

"No cats," said Old Mother Hubbard firmly, as she closed the cottage door. "Just lots and lots of dogs and maybe a fat little puppy or two," she said laughing.

To Try

trying. Obviously, he could not fail.

NO ONE can succeed all the time. Failure in some things is inevitable. But the warm feeling of trying and losing, trying and losing and succeeding is a feeling that belongs to growing-up and in this learning process, we adults are participating with you.

Attainment of the things you want, things that will give you poise and self-confidence, are most important at this stage of your life. The lead in the school-play, the attracting to your side of a "he" or "she" whom you have selected for steady dating; acquiring skill in some athletic attempt all are part of gaining your "spider webs" of strength and courage in these hectic high school years.

"Lorelei Coiff"

The trend for winter and the holiday season is the new Siren Lift.

Soft deep waves sweep upward across the back of the head with the eyes and mouth accentuated by the clean sweep of Siren effect, bangs over the forehead.

A professionally prescribed permanent wave forms the pattern of the coiffure, giving it the appearance of natural curl.
