Ballet Russe Was a Disappointment

It is a sad thing to see a ballet company on the decline. But I fear that if the opening program of the Ballet Russe Friday evening was an indication of the quality of that group, then let us bow our heads and say a final benediction. At the outset, it was distressing to see such a small audience gards was true of the Ballet Russe's reprisply a blessing in disquise—for this performance could have been done more to reverse the cause of ballet more to remain and for full imaginative effects of a grammar-school production.

Any theatrical endeaver—be it ballet must be recalled to the such drops and the work of the control of the such drops and the such drops a
