

If, upon each morning's awakening, and perhaps once every hour each day, we could hear a tender voice whisper guiding thoughts into our ear . . . what a help this would be. For most of us want to do right, to think right . . . but we need frequent reminding. That's why, in youth, we need to acquire GOOD THINKING HABITS!

Shutterbugs Win Honors in Print Contests

Dancer by Fountain

Dolls and Dolls

Perfect Features

Beautiful Anne Wilson's features made an ideal subject for this print by Cranbrook photographer Harvey Croze. The white outline on black was created by a solarization process. The photograph was another prizewinner at a recent Greater Detroit camera club council print competition. Anne, the daughter of the Thomas E. Wilsons of W. Long Lake road, is a granddaughter of former defense chief G. E. Wilson.

Tour at Tea

Guests got a tour of the Playhouse Sunday when the Village Players of Birmingham opened their 33rd season with an afternoon tea. President Eliot Higgins points with pride to the newly remodeled make-up room backstage as he acts as guide for Jeanne Ruslander and Robert Luscombe, students in Wayne university's speech and drama departments.

Pavilion Designed for Brussels World's Fair

James H. Carmel, Curator of exhibits and education at Cranbrook Institute of Science, has recently been appointed assistant coordinator of exhibits for the U.S. entry in the up-coming Brussels World's Fair of 1958.

The central pavilion is approximately the size of the Roman colosseum. It will house an exhibit of American Arts and Sciences. Building to the right is 1,100 seat theatre.

Cranbrook Helps Scouts Study Minerals

Preparing minerals for Boy Scout mineral and geology month are Earl Neeb, Walter P. Nickell of Cranbrook Institute of Science, and Doris Otter Graham. Nickell, who leads institute's junior member field trips, is co-operating with the scout program by sorting, labeling and breaking up minerals from the institute's large collection for the scouts. He will show slides and specimens to scout troop B-22 at First Methodist church Oct. 23. Neeb, a science major at Highland Park junior college, has been working with Nickell on junior field trips as an apprentice for seven years, and expects to make the natural sciences his life work.

Carnegie Tech Campaign Leaders

Detroit's John Bigley, Carl H. Kindl and James G. Balmer are greeted by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson and Dr. John C. Warner (right), president of Carnegie Institute of Technology, at a meeting in Pittsburgh for national leaders in Carnegie Tech's $24,350,000 building and development program. Wilson is national chairman of the alumni division. Bigley (left), Detroit clan president, is sales engineer with ITE Circuit Breaker Co.; Kindl (center) is a vice president of General Motors; Balmer (right center) is general manager of Harley Earl, Inc. These three are chairmen for the Detroit region of the campaign.
