

These Former Area Prep Grid Stars Wear College Colors Now

Ten colleges and universities in Michigan, the midwest and the east have on their rosters this fall football players who starred in recent years at high schools in this area—Birmingham, Southfield, Cranbrook, Troy and Bloomfield Hills.

Several of the collegiate gridders are regulars on their respective teams. Others are up-and-coming players counted on for a lot of help before the year is over and in the next couple of seasons. At least one, West Point's Pete Dawkins, a junior and former Cranbrook standout, may even be an All-American candidate.

These photographs were compiled with the assistance of public relations departments and sports information services in the several colleges—LES LINE, SPORTS EDITOR.

The Birmingham Eccentric

Practitioners of diligence in seeking a goal, however large or small it be, is a virtue too often neglected. The application of careful, steady and painstaking effort to a job is the best helper that even extraordinary talent can have as an ally. "Seeing a thing through" is a habit of great value.
