Carole Wreford,
 K. W. Schleicher
 Married Saturday

Carole Evelyn Wreford became the bride of Kenneth Walter Schleicher Saturday in Gesu church before the altar adorned with white gladioli and carnations.

She is the daughter of the John Thomas Wrefords, Sr., of Northlawn avenue and Ken's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth V. Weiner of Bloomfield Hills.

The bride chose candlelight alencon lace applique over imported French satin made a medallion neckline and chapel train. Her illusion fingertip veil fell from a satin pearl-trimmed cap and she carried white roses with stephanotis.

MRS. JOHN T. Christie, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and bridesmaids were Anne Kropik, sister of the groom, Angella Tiseo and Call Nash, Judy Fenwick, niece of the bride, was junior bridesmaid. They wore honey-colored satin waltz length gowns and carried copper toned miniature mums.

John Kropik was best man for his brother-in-law, John T. Wreford, Jr., brother of the bride of New York, John T. Christie, Allen Weiner and Steven Schyck, nephew of the groom, seated the guests.

MRS. WREFORD wore for her daughter's wedding purple chiffon with pink accents. A corsage of pink roses completed her ensemble. Mrs. Weiner chose sable crepe with bronze accessories and a bronze mum corsage.

After the breakfast reception the couple left for a northern honeymoon. When they return they'll make their home in Detroit.

Parties Original

By VIRGINIA COLE

Many teen-agers today will say that they would rather bring their friends home than to go out for their entertainment. This is good. In relation to all that is heard and printed about anarchy in trouble and having wrong habits and attitudes, this statement may be on the startling side. However, it is true.

If you wish to have your adolescents and teens feel that their home is where they want to be and if their friends indicate by coming around frequently that they too enjoy the atmosphere it is because they are made to feel wanted and are provided for in your home.

TEENS TODAY should have facilities for their playtime, snack privileges within limitations and the privilege of making noise. After school, the mother should be at home so she can meet the friends, laugh with them and enjoy their fun. Evening groups of teens in the home are fine and should be encouraged but always with the parents at home.

A cocktail party does not necessarily have to be preceding a special dance or event. There should be lots of these and at all of the different homes of the members of any group of couples who go around together.

Now and then get a theatre party together of moms and dads and teens. Following the early show, go back to one of the homes and have hot dogs and cokes together. All can chip in on the food and all have fun together. Another evening, a bowling party with the kids. Or how about an evening at the YM or YW for a splash party?

THIS IS NOT to say that parents and teens have to be together for their social functions often, but once in a while is fun for everyone. It is not alone fun—it Builds a better understanding between them. Parents have to give a little to enjoy the kids and kids have to grow up just a little to appreciate the parents. This is good for both.

Encourage your sons and daughters to take an active part in the young people's parties and activities at your church.

Get several carloads together some Saturday or Sunday and drive to some place of interest, a golf practice range, a rifle club, a state park for a picnic, or anything that would seem to be fun at the time.

Instead of just deciding that your family will go on this outing, ask the kids to round up their gang and moms and dads all go.

THE PURPOSE of the column this week, as you can see, is to suggest some ways to have fun with your teen-age sons and daughters and eradicate some of the adverse criticism fired at them from all sides today. Help them to keep busy with wholesome fun and activities which is all that the great majority desires.

For the most part, what parents put into their children is just what they will get from them. Shake off some of your apathetic attitude, sacrifice some of your time, know their friends, like their friends and do things for them and with them.

Birthdays, anniversaries, guests, births, parties are all news—the society editor about them.
