Wood Creek Farms To Post All Notices

By NITA HARD

WOODCREEK FARMS — If Woodcreek Farms residents are going to be informed of the law within their little village, they're also going to have to be pretty hardy souls.

Legal notices, ordinances and the like will be posted at various locations outdoors. So, button up your over-coat and wear your boots, the council may have two or three typewritten pages for you to digest as the wind nips at your ears.

Whether it's the quaintness of the custom or pure economy (since the village has no funds at all until settlement with Farmington, Tex.) that has invoked this practice is hard to say. Woodcreek Farms President Alger Clark proudly points out "We're going to keep things simple here—just as the early settlers did."

AT ANY RATE the charter requires only that notices be published in a newspaper printed in the village (and there is none at present) or that they may be posted in at least three places within the village.

So, ordinance two passed at a special meeting of the Council Sept. 11 and dealing with culverts, drainage ditches, laterals and catch basins was officially posted Saturday at seven places within the village limits.

TWO MAJOR SPOTS at Wellington and the Eastbrook-Millbrook corner, and at Wellington and Old Colony will provide a special bulletin board for such legal business.

Five other points, Middlebelt and Uley; Middlebelt and Wellington; Middlebelt and Millbrook; Wellington at the southeast corner of Northwestern and Wellington and the southeast corner of 13 Mile will carry the postings on whatever posts are available.

Village clerk Arthur Busch said, "Postings will be made at these locations until further notice. If and when any changes are made the Eccentric will be informed of them."

ORDINANCE TWO provides rules and regulations for the issuance of permits to construct culverts and driveway approaches, drainage ditches in Woodcreek Farms and provides for penalties of violations of the ordinance. After Oct. 4 it shall be unlawful to proceed with the construction of driveway approaches or with the excavation for or the construction of any new building within the village limits; or to move any machinery, equipment or materials along any vacant property preparatory for such excavation or construction until a culvert shall have been installed and covered as described and pursuant to a permit as provided for.

THE ORDINANCE is primarily designed to end conditions of improper or obstructed drainage brought about by careless methods reported to the council in past meetings.

Woodcreek Farms has adopted Farmington township's building code as interim legislation and have authorized Wendell Brown, village legal advisor, to negotiate a contract with the township to provide building inspection with cost to be determined, subject to the council's approval, at its Oct. 1 meeting.

Authorize Flu Shots For S'field Workers

SOUTHFIELD — The township board voted to pay for Asian flu shots for the township policemen, firemen and water department employees. All employees agreed to take the shots.

Dr. John Maloney, township health officer, has offered the shots to the employees for $1.50 instead of the usual $3, in order to avert a crippling epidemic that could cost the township's protective services in bed.

A motion by Trustee Thomas M. Costello to express the board's appreciation of Dr. Maloney's action, was approved.

Volunteers Services To Tend Park Gate

SOUTHFIELD — David Campbell, 18488 Beverly road, at his own request, has been named keeper of the Southfield Park gate at his own request.

That is, as soon as the township erects a gate to keep Campbell volunteered to open the gate every day at 8 a.m. and close it at 9 or 10 p.m. if the township could erect a gate, put a lock on it and maintain it.

Trustee John J. Hollywood suggested a heavy chain in place of an ordinary type gate which in the past has been knocked down regularly.

'Wake Up, Darling' In W. Blm Oct. 17-19

Remember back in your childhood, when a barn was used by farmers for housing stock and storing hay?

The phrase, 'down at the barn' has been given the modern treatment and has been transformed into a magical key to the world of show business.

In barns all over the country, little theatre, straw-hat theatre, theatre-in-the-round, work-shop theatre, whatever the powers that be choose to label it, show business has been extended to the part-time actor in all of us.

The world behind the curtain, however, is more than a stage cleverly contrived over the stanchions. The sets and props are more than painted cardboard and borrowed sets.

THE COLORS, dimensions, contrasts, suitability, esthetic quality, technical advantages, lighting, contemporary blending, shading, sound control, familiar-unfamiliar terms that must be dealt with in the planning of every set are all the tools-of-trade of many people.

Ordinary people, who are so dedicated to the furthering of theatre art, devote hours of precious evenings, weekends, holidays to make the "next production the best!"

IN 'THE BARN', are materials worth thousands of dollars in time and property to the Township

"Wake Up, Darling", Oct. 17, 18, and 19, the hayloft will be waiting in its quiet darkness to receive the disassembled parts of the lovely, make-believe world to give it haven for the next two months.

PEOPLE'S COLUMN Opposes Bloomfield's Oct. 8 Millage Vote

To the Editor:

As one member of the Fourth Estate to another, and to keep the records straight, permit me to submit a correction to your recent reportorial effort on Bloomfield township sewage project.

Your article heralds my opposition to this project in preference to better schools, better police and better protection, but no where do you quote me that I am in favor of an overall sewage master plan that would benefit all the citizens of our township.

It is obvious that the present plan was conceived by engineers, bondholders, realtors and ambitious politicians to impose the burden of the township's sewage problem on the taxpayers, who have the audacity to ask for a note on Oct. 8, guaranteeing adequate sewage system to the promoters of shopping centers along Telegraph road, rather than to benefit the people en masse.

IF THE INSTIGATORS of better sewage facilities were well informed they would present to the people of Bloomfield township a sewerage project, rather than along all the main travel arteries of the township.

The people would probably welcome a practical plan of that kind and would vote for it with an assurance of immediate remedial possibilities, rather than wait for 51 per cent vote approval of various subdivisions, a reality which may come to pass fifty years after we are six feet under.

As each subdivision votes to alleviate their own undesirable condition, they will find the cost prohibitive, and a sewage tax upon
