

John L's Famous Belt Coming Here

The famous John L. Sullivan championship belt is coming to Birmingham. Missing several years, the belt, costing $10,000 when presented to the great heavy-weight champion in 1887, was found in Hammond, Ind. The variety shop will be the belt's first Michigan stop. It will be on display here for 10 days, beginning Saturday.

AROUND OUTDOORS

It's feeding time at the conservation department's Wolf lake fish hatchery as some hungry trout get a serving of dry food pellets. Development of this pelleted fish food has doubled fish plantings because the new food produces faster growth at less expense than former methods. During 1957 some 2,560,000 hatchery trout were released in Michigan lakes and streams.

New Use for Dry Food Pellets

Dry pelleted foods have found many uses in these days of modern packaging and storage.

Dry foods, with high contents of bone, fish, meat and other important dietary requirements may be purchased at local stores to feed cattle, pigs, and even people. And every GI who has served in the armed forces knows well the dried powders that mess chiefs magically develop into milk, potatoes and other goodies.

So it was not without precedent that conservation department fishery workers began probing the idea of dry, pelleted foods for hatcheries. Such dry foods are all water soluble, and fish have to feed in water. Hence, why not cure up a proper diet to make fish grow rapidly, and at the same time do away with the old mess, bother and cost of refrigeration involved in fresh meat feeds?

A nutritional expert was hired several years ago to study the problem. His work was very complicated, involved many long formulas and produced a notable lack of public enthusiasm.

AFTER A FEW years of testing and study, however, he and his associates came up with a fish diet that could be pelleted, that would save the state up to $80,000 per year, and that would, as promised, do away with the troublesome meat diet.

Today, Michigan's hatcheries and rearing stations all use pelleted foods. Savings have ranged from $50,000 to $80,000 annually. The food can be stored easily, so hatchery officials no longer have to bite their nails waiting for shipments of fresh meat to arrive.

Trout have to eat, and if not fed, they eat each other. Happily, too, trout seem to like the new dry diet—unlike the mess sergeant's victims.

The conservation department has announced that money from the sale of Great Lakes bottom lands will be used for the purchase of three tracks of high priority wild-fowl lands. Two tracks totaling 160 acres will be purchased for addition to the Shawansee River state game area southwest of Saginaw. Eighteen acres, including about 9,000 feet of lake frontage on Portage point, Delta county, will be purchased for addition to Menominee state forest.

Grassland and forest fires, capable of causing tremendous damage to natural resources, also may bring about legal troubles for Michigan residents. Several landowners face court action for violation of state laws governing use
