BITS OF BIRMINGHAM

WE SURE BELIEVE in credit should go where credit is the. The Eccentric tried it has week but missed by two pre-cincts. In our story of hast week's weak city election results, we said precinct one (north of Maple and west of Quarton lake and the Rounge river) led voting percentages with a 123, or 182 voters out of a registered 1.485, Well, it has been pointed out by our Correction Editor No. 1337 (a friend of ours) that precinct one was a close second. In first place was precinct three (east of Woodward, north of Maple, west of the railroad). And by godly, that's right! So the credit is due precinct three with a 12.9 percentage, or 197 of a reg-istered 1522.

A STATE HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT crea was out on Troa bridge bridge over the Grand Trunk this week giving the bridge its first repair job since its construction in 1930. The job foreman reports more than 30 culic yards of dirt were scraped off the road crossing the span. Sandblasting the Bloomfield Hills bridge was considered, but it was fell it would be a waste of money. The bridge is a favorite "bangout" for area teenage yandals who like to pain their names, girl friends' names and school names all over the by-now well decorated structure.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER John Mackie will be in Royan Oak's Longfellow school next Wednesday at 8 p.m., April 23, to tell how Oakland county fits into the state's high-way development program. It's hardly likely he'll have any debrine information yet on where the proposed Oaklanddefinite information yet on where the proposed Obel Marshall Hastings route will come up that Reven Dakes and expressive relief to the Marshall Hastings route will come to the Marshall Hastings of the West Company of the West

B'ham Schools Break Precedent, OK Plan

Birmingham's school board broke a precedent Tues ight when it granted permission to the Bloomfield art a ight when it granted permission to a blooming are a lation to use Baldwin school's auditorium at no charge hree special programs during the May 17 to 24 Birming rts festival.
