No space in the attic? Basement in use or no basement at all?
BUT you still need extra room!
Then how about adding space to your home by enclosing your back or side porch.

The cost involved will be much less than to start a complete new construction.

Present porch posts can often be used as part of the framing, and electrical wiring may already be in place.

A wide variety of attractive flooring materials are available if a new floor is needed.

Color Blending Adds New Beauty To Modern Glass-Walled Homes

Skillful blending of natural and artificial color has become an important factor in making today's indoor-outdoor living more attractive.

Prior to the beginning of the new developments in glass products, designers, homes and gardens rarely showed any evidence of pleasing color coordination.

The few standard colors accepted. One important impetus to the enjoyment of artistic color planning after house, with little or none through window walls is a new neutral grey polished plate glass, specially made to stably reduce glare and heat input through it without altering true colors.

Now, however with the trend to glass-walled, indoor-outdoor living, people have become more conscious of their surroundings. Color has come to be considered an integral part of overall planning.

SOFT PASTEL shades of walls and shrubbery to present a picture outlook from the room, and plate glass of the highest distortion-free clarity.

A photograph record album the contribution color can make to "open living" have come many color-saw blades.

Glass Does It

Living with the outdoors is a pleasure in this contemporary living room. A window wall of polished plate glass, including wind screen, bathes the room in softened natural light and brings it together with the outdoors in an unbroken feeling of spaciousness. Glare and solar heat are reduced without appreciable altering colors.
