

No Immediate Rate Rise for Sewage Disposal Foreseen

No immediate increase in rates charged Birmingham residents is foreseen as a result of the increased sewage disposal rate to be charged by the city of Detroit.

Birmingham city commissioners were officially notified Monday night of the Detroit rate increase from 22 1/2 to 22 cents per 100 cubic feet, effective January 1, 1959.

Oakland county drain commissioner Daniel W. Harry said the increase was to finance the additional sewage disposal facilities needed by Detroit to provide disposal service to suburbs.

City Finance Director James Purkies told commissioners there has accumulated under present charges enough to call all outstanding bonds, so that the ten-cent increase will have no immediate effect upon municipalities in the southeastern Oklahoma county sewage disposal system, which includes Birmingham.

BITS OF BIRMINGHAM

Birmingham has a new daily water consumption record. An all-time high of 667,190 gallons was pumped Aug. 4. The old record of 644,056, set June 15, 1957, was also surpassed Aug. 2. All Birmingham water now comes from Detroit.

Birmingham's Lions were not the world's happiest cats following a sound thumping by Rotary club in the recent interclub golf tournament at Sunnysbrook. According to the Roar, local publication for the Lions, "Our rats that went down with the ship couldn't break us, although three of them hit that figure." Rotarian Bill Restrick was medalist with a 77 while three teammates carded 78.

The August 16 issue of the Saturday Evening Post carries an article telling how former Birmingham resident Sally Smith and other tenth science at Woods Hole children's school of science, Woods Hole, Mass. Miss Smith, 28, is the daughter of the Raymond H. Smith, 104 N. Woodward, Birmingham. She became interested in science at Birmingham high school, went on to Vassar on a scholarship for her master's. She teaches science at a Poughkeepsie, N. Y., high school during the regular year in addition to her services at the summertime science camp near Cape Cod. The Post article, on the stands Tuesday, is entitled "School for Young Wonders."

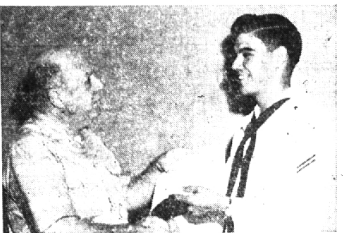

Garbage lived up the conversation at the end of the Birmingham city commission meeting Monday night. First Mayor Carl Ingram reported with heart indignation that he and his little daughter hauled the garbage to the curb the other night. And the next day pickup trucks hit every street in the Birmingham neighborhood except the mayor's. And you had so much garbage, he quipped Commissioner William H. Hargom. Suggest Commissioner Charles Ruffey, "Could it possibly be the quality of the garbage?" City Clerk Lester Hartley added an account of a Saturday morning phone conversation with a Birmingham woman whose garbage had been picked up early that morning. To keep raccoons out of the park, the woman had grabbed a newly delivered package from J. L. Hudson's, plunked it across the top. Next morning both garbage and package were gone? A plant backfired on Mrs. Harry Bartwell, 602 W. Frank, Birmingham. After she nursed a shot her mother brought her to a flowering, vigorous good health, she checked a reference book and discovered that it would soon bear bright red berries that were extremely tempting to small children. And in certain varieties of this nightshade plant, she learned, the berries are deadly poison. That was enough for Mrs. Bartwell, who has three small children. The pretty nightshade is no more.

Festival Preparation

A new high in Flint civic pride is symbolized by Sophia Brannoff, "Miss Golden Milestone," as the city where General Motors was born in 1908, celebrates GM's 50th anniversary. The geraniums she's watering at an altitude of 20 feet (a tower truck got her up there) are among the hundreds of colorful decorations on downtown streets where a grand night parade and other events Friday will climax the Golden Milestone celebration. Pat Boone, Phil Silvers and other celebrities will be present. In the background is the city hall, part of Flint's new Municipal Center, which will be dedicated on the same day.
