He'll Always Remember This:
Staredown At Gunpoint
Tops Cop's Experience

By SUE GREENLEAF
A policeman has many unforgettable days. Mr. D. Lloyd McKinney (really Dr. McKinney, but he prefers to be called mister), of Romey road in Franklin Village was a policeman while working for his doctor's degree in education, inasmuch as he was interested in people and what makes them do what they do. He is now head of the juvenile detention school in Detroit.

Mr. McKinney was just another cop, walking his beat about 7 one afternoon. He was checking all the doors in the streets and alleyways when all of a sudden one of them opened.
He remembered something someone once told him. "There is nothing more terrifying than walking down a dark street, with no one around but yourself and the moon shining your way when a door opens. If a chill doesn't run down your back, brother, you're dead."

In an instant, Mr. McKinney knew three possibilities of what happened. Either someone had broken in and had left, someone had broken in and was still in there, or no one had been in at all. Which was it?

HE KNEW it was his duty to secure the place so he went. He peeked behind all the tables, curtains, etc., in the small confectionary store. There were no people all right there, he went down a narrow hallway about four feet wide to the end where he saw three doors.
The middle door was boarded off and locked. He figured this led to the alley. He was holding a gun in his right hand and a flashlight in his left. Since the door was open, he opened the door with his flashlight. It was a stairway leading to the basement. He was looking behind old boxes when a cat jumped out from behind one of them. This took about five years off his life.

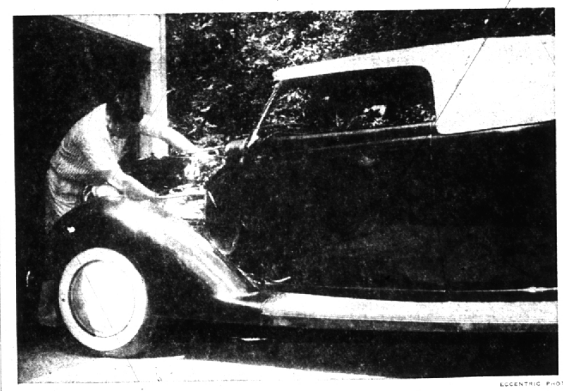

Since that everything was alright there, he came upstairs. When he opened the door, the door directly across the hall opened, and Mr. McKinney could see was another gun about a foot and a half from his own pointing directly at him.
THEY STOOD motionless there for what seemed like three and a half weeks. A few seconds later the other man said, "Thank God, you're a cop!" It was the owner who lived upstairs. He had forgotten to lock the door and when he heard noises in the room, he thought it was a prowler.
Why didn't either of them shoot? If either of them had, the other would have been dead, for the reaction of the other would be to squeeze the trigger.
Why didn't they shoot? Because neither of them were killers. They didn't have time to think, but subconsciously they knew all their lives they had been taught to resist mankind. If they had had time, they would have said to themselves, "Here is a thief. I'll kill him, and the other both would have lost their lives."
"Since it is in the minds of most men that the seeds of peace must be planted."

My Dad and I
Father's Position
Doesn't Interfere
With School Life

By ANN BUCHANAN
The sun was warm outdoors, but the atmosphere calm and cool indoors when I interviewed Becky Wagner.
In talking to 17-year-old Becky, a high school senior, I discovered that it wasn't until the end of the eighth grade that she fully realized she would soon be attending school under the administration of her father, Ross A. Wagner, principal of Birmingham high school.
Feeling neither especially happy or sad, she accepted the situation and soon found that she very seldom saw her father anyway. Becky does feel, though, that she would rather have her father be principal than a teacher to whom she might possibly be assigned.
Her relationships with students or teachers are not affected by Mr. Wagner's position. Being an exceptionally good and cooperative student, Becky should have no cause for worry about teachers' reports, anyway.

ALTHOUGH she has seen her father seldom in the past few years, Becky still feels a certain sense of pride at seeing him address assemblies and other gatherings.
Never having worked as an office helper at school, Becky is not too familiar with a principal's work. However, she added as an afterthought, "I used to help Mom and Dad ready the diplomas and put rubber bands on stuff for them."
Mr. Wagner has been the Birmingham . . .

Dual Purpose Machinery

Designed for showing and going purposes is this 1936 Ford roadster, receiving final adjustment from owner Jim Traynor, 814 Pierce, Birmingham. Jim's self-built auto runs a modified 1955 Oldsmobile engine and is neatly customized, boasting a chopped top as its most noticeable feature. For hot rod enthusiasts, the engine packs a four-carburetor manifold, hot ignition system, roller camshaft, is bored and should turn 7,000 r.p.m. plus, according to the owner's calculations. For non-enthusiasts, suffice it to say the car should perform well.

4. Ram Rod—D—Dunno Eden and his Teenage Gang
- Album of the Week
Name: Frankie Avalon
Artist: Frankie Avalon
Type: Rock and Roll

NOTES: After two weeks of serious contention, "Little Star" has taken over first place in Birmingham and Detroit, in addition to rating high in the national charts. As a result, "Poor Little Fool" (Ricky Nelson) has slipped down a notch while "Volare" has gained popularity to jump into third place. "Devoted to You" should contend for first or second place next week—good flip side, "Bird Dog". The novelty, "Western Movies," showed signs of fading, but has made a slight comeback to fifth place.
Little Frankie Avalon holds sixth place with "Gingerbread" and Pat Boone follows in seventh with "If Dreams Come True." "Everybody Loves a Lover" (Doris Day) has been a big sound in Detroit, but just made it in Birmingham's number eight slot. In number nine, "Sadie Darling," going on its third month, has moved up tremendously, and promises to stay, while "Just a Dream" (Jimmie Clanton), which enjoyed a brief showing in second place last week, in the course of two weeks, dropped into tenth.

On the verge of breaking into the top ten is Eddie Coleman's "Summer Time Blues." Bobby Day's "Rockin' Robin" and Bobby Darin's "Darin in the Morning."
Glen's reports that the new Everly disc, "Devoted to You" and "Bird Dog" is selling very well. Although teenagers are requesting to hear the novelty side, "Devoted" is doing the selling at Glen's.
The Everly Brothers, who have had the biggest record of the 1958 season in "Dream," have had nothing but hits. "Bye Bye Love," "Wake Up Little Susie," "All I Have to Do Is Dream" and even "This Little Girl of Mine" have been very successful.

Right now the many graduates of the various high schools who are planning on attending college in the fall seem to be very busy preparing themselves. Sewing on name-tapes, always a problem, but then all the new clothes seem to make it all worth while. Whether it's picking, sewing, buying or visiting the various colleges each individual has plenty of time to do to prepare for his or her future.

Bloomfield Hills Hunt Club was the scene of a very exciting swimming meet Saturday. The many spectators were kept in suspense all the time, especially the last few minutes. First Lake Country club and the Hunt club ran a neck and neck race until the very end. Gus Leader, anchor man in a relay, representing the Hunt club, saved the day for B.H.H. with a spectacular win.
