THE BIRMINGHAM ECCENTRIC

On Tour

Robert Hill (left) of Birmingham, vice-president of Fruehauf Trailers, and Alexander Aranyos of Great Neck, N.Y., president of Fruehauf International, pose at New York's International airport as they prepare to depart on a flight to Rio de Janeiro. They are on a tour of South America and will spend two weeks visiting their factories and dealers.

BITS OF BIRMINGHAM

Birmingham city commissioners Royal Oak, Ferndale and Hazel Park went into effect several years ago. The previous instance also was a Pontiac fire.

they discovered Monday night that their former white-surfaced tables had been replaced by a blond, wood-patterned work plane, eight inches wider. They all agreed that fewer agendas, name plates, reports, etc., will be going over the top at future meetings. City Clerk Irene Hanley is especially pleased. She must fortify herself with huge minute books and bed-sheet special assessment rolls.

A longtime reader of The Birmingham Eccentric, noting the daily summertime glamour parade on city streets these days has put her thoughts in these words:
"The man in the street stands still and looks,
"Looks at the ladies with whom he flirts,
"Ladies, I said—or are they boys?
"Oh, when will females again wear skirts?"
—An Observer"

How can you tell a fire station without a sign? Especially Birmingham's residential-type facilities? So that's why Birmingham's two recently constructed stations are going to get silver-colored plastic signs on the front of the stations. In 6-inch letters will be "Birmingham Fire Dept." with the station's name—"Chesterfield" or "Adams"—underneath in 4-inch letters. (These identifications should be of particular help to drive-in fires).

Birmingham fire department Smith, sent a pumper and a crew of five men to assist in last week Wednesday's (Aug. 13) fire in downtown Pontiac. According to Park H. Smith, Birmingham fire chief, it was the second time the local department had been called upon for help since the mutual aid pact with Birmingham, Pontiac,
