Groundbreaking Ceremonies Held

mail; Roland Reese, Birmingham postmaster, and Otto Leipold, post office foreman, look on. The new brick and cinderblock structure will cover 10,000 square feet. An additional 1,700 feet of parking facilities will be provided. Reese said he expected the building to be completed sometime in March of 1959.

WHY?

Does the Bride Throw her Bouquet?

In fourteenth century France wedding guests competed in snatching the bride's garter for luck. Although she usually left one dangling conspicuously, the scramble was rather hard on the bride; so throwing the bride's stocking was substituted.

Stockings are not easily removed or thrown; either, consequently quick thinking girls tossed their bouquets to clamorous friends. In Wales, a boisterous custom was catching the bride before she could flee home from the ceremony. Whoever did was supposed to marry within the year. (Copyright 1956 John Emery Ent., Inc.)
