William Gordons Entertain Guests from Povungnituk

Mrs. William Gordon of Robinhood Circle will long remember the morning of Jan. 29, when she was waiting at Detroit Major airport for a friend, Robert Cowen, who called her the evening before from Cleveland, Ohio. Descending with him from the plane was Father Andre Steinmann and Charley Anaitok from Povungnituk in northern Quebec, Canada.

Fr. Steinmann and Charley, an Eskimo, traveled by dog sled, boat and plane, before reaching Cleveland, where they spent a few days before coming to Birmingham. Their interest here was Cranbrook Institute where Charley's carvings are now on display in an exhibit of Eskimo carvings and handicraft.

Charley's carvings are also on display at the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D. C., and he is known as "chief carver" in his village of 150 Eskimos.

Fr. Steinmann with Cowens help was seeking an economic outlet for the Eskimo instead of continuing to receive souvenir prices at Hudson Bay for their skilled work.

Father Steinmann gave up his family and friends in France at the age of 18 to take the vow of poverty as an Oblate Father and has spent the last 20 years working with the Eskimos in the Canadian Arctic.

He arrived in the village with nothing and built a mission with the help of the Eskimos. Father Steinmann is minister, radioman, doctor, hunter, mechanic, writer and teaches school to 73 children daily. He travels as much as 6,000 miles a year by dog sled and boat along the coast of Ungava Bay.

On Sunday night from 5:30 to 7:30 is Eskimo time at all the Oblate missions from Chino to Sookla and the news of each settlement is passed on as the Eskimos take over the mike.

Many curious eyes watched Charley throughout his visit here as he was attired in his Eskimo parka that was embroidered across the chest. From the sleeves hung a rick rack fringe. The pants too were embroidered and on his feet were mukluks. Charley's only English was "thank you."

On the way to the Gordons for lunch they stopped at the Detroit zoo. So many different kinds of animals intrigued Charley and the size of the elephant and the ape were almost unbelievable to him. He was also amazed at all the "white people" there were here for they see so few in Povungnituk.

Among the other guests for luncheon were Richard James of Detroit, Keith Kragg, curator and editor of publications at the zoo, and Miss Kay Wheelock, second grade teacher at Harlan school.

After lunch they visited Cranbrook Institute and once again stopped at the zoo before leaving their plane at the airport.

The Norman James, Jr., of Hadlington road were among a lucky group who won a 10-day cruise. Their trip began when they boarded the Queen of Bermuda at New York city for a planned tour of Jamaica and Cuba.

Their ship docked at Haiti for their first day on land where they toured the colorful countryside. They were wine and dined at the hotel Riviera before boarding the ship for Kingston. They found Kingston a very picturesque town and when the guided tour came to a close the Murtle Bank hotel was waiting to entertain them. They spent their last stop where a fleet of cars took the group to the Tropicaana and a sight seeing trip through the island. The James picked up souvenirs in each port that would delight their children who were waiting at home for them.

California and its beautiful weather was the vacation spot for the Alphouse Dussouas of Upton road for the past six weeks. They made their trip by air so they could include the Christmas holidays in their plans.

They spent most of their time with their sons and their families who are residing in California. Son, Alfonso, Jr., is settled in Van Nuys, and son, James, in Hollywood. The Milton Peaseleys of Highland Park, relatives of the Dussouas joined them in California. Dussouas returned on Jan. 5, while Mrs. Dussouas prolonged her visit until Feb. 1.

Mrs. Norman Terry of Dover road entertained friends at a bridge brunch at Forest Lake country club on Wednesdays afternoon. Her guests were Mrs. Robert Lovell and Mrs. Carl Hansen of Birmingham and Mrs. Gordon Miller of Rochester, Mich.

The Birmingham alumnae group of Delta Gamma sorority gathered at the Oakhill drive home of Mrs. Donald Smith on Tuesday evening. The group made plans for their Founders Day dinner, and to help sponsor the blind in the way of materials and money, which is their rational project.

The evening's topic was "Sight Conservation and Aid to the Blind." The group met once a month.

The Clifford Meyers of Oakhill drive had a "few" nice days on the beach in Florida during their recent three-week vacation. They stayed at the Boynton Beach at Palm Beach and spent their time driving to the Keys and deep sea fishing.

On one of their fishing trips Mrs. Meyers caught a dolphin, which is now being mounted. They flew to the Grand Bahama hotel on the largest island in the Bahamas on one of their side trips.

The William Gordons and their little daughter, Nora, are moving from their home on Weatherstone road to New York city March 1. Gardner has been transferred there and is with Saks Fifth Avenue.

While the Francis Brauns were waiting for their new home to be completed on W. Orchard Hill drive, Mrs. Braun spent the last six weeks visiting her parents, the Anthe Cassenbels of St. Petersburg, Fla. Braun flew down to spend two "chilly" weeks with them.

Braun is affiliated with Radio Distributors in Detroit. Their move was from Grosse Pointe.

New residents on Leadberry road in the new Chapel Hill subdivision are Mr. and Mrs. Angelo Pauli of Howell, Mich., and Mrs. George Eshen, Mrs. Pauli's mother. Each is a family manager with Center Inn Foundry in Detroit.

Newcomers to Burnley drive are the Robert Kitchers of Richmond, Va. Kitcher is in car sales of the Ford division of Ford Motor Co. They have three children, Diane, 14, attending Lerby junior high, Pamela, 11, and Robert, 10, pupils at Harlan.

Swimming tops the family's sports list with the children all holding state records in Virginia. They are now busy learning a new sport to them, ice skating.

chells of Charing Way, formerly of Detroit? They have two sons, Tony, 3, and Larry, 9 months. Merchell is a graphic engineer with General Motors Corp. and enjoys painting in his spare time.

Mrs. Merchell also enjoys painting and has recently completed an arts and crafts course at Cranbrook.

The Birmingham Community House solicitation campaign luncheon will be at the Community House Feb. 19. Mrs. Norman Terry of Dover road, supervisor of the North Adams area for the last eight years, will attend the luncheon with the volunteer captains and co-captains in this area.

Attending will be Mrs. Robert Schwab of Oakhill drive, captain, and her co-captains Mrs. Peter Benedetti of Upton drive and Mrs. Robert Wason of Lanerigan drive.

Also present will be Mrs. Robert Lavesay of Pine Hill drive, Mrs. Russell Fisher of Burnley drive, Mrs. John Gilray and Mrs. Philip Ross, both of Avondale road, Mrs. Robert Clark and Mrs. Franklin Mills of Greentree road.

Other captains and co-captains are Mrs. James Newmeyer of Vay lane, Mrs. Donald Mills of Romney road, Mrs. Jack Bahr of Charnwood drive and Mrs. Milton Fishbeck of Halverson drive. The drive will get underway on Feb. 21.

Want ads cannot be accepted after 5 p.m. each Tuesday.
