Grandma's Apparel Depicts Days of Great Grandmother

To the Editor:
In regards to your comic strip, when Grandma was a girl, I found it very amusing.

However, your artist was somewhat confused as to what grandmas actually wore as a girl. Being a grandmother, I can tell you. She wore exactly what you are showing now. Black dresses, knee length skirts, lots of fringe and beads. And short shaggy hair.

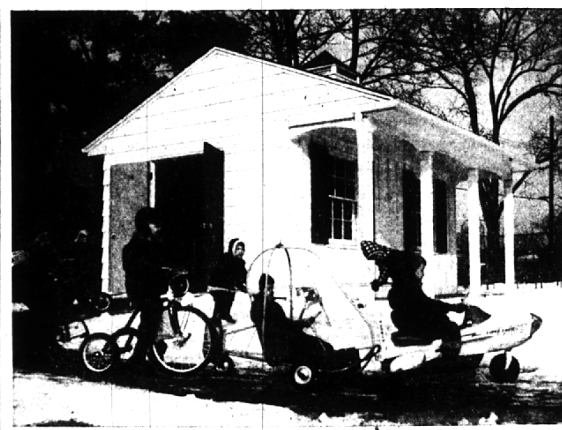

Hope I haven't hurt your feelings, but the styles drawn by your artist depict the days of great grandmas and I'm not ready for that yet. So please, don't try to convince anyone that today's grandmas wore those clothes.

Nursery School Uses Dual Purpose House

Newly constructed behind First Presbyterian church, the little white colonial house from which a parade of cycling nursery school youngsters is emerging stores bikes, airplanes and outdoor play equipment when not in use. The structure also provides a playhouse for the children in the First Presbyterian church nursery school in milder weather. Two youngsters play on the tetter totter outside the house. Photos of nursery school activities such as this will be on display at an exhibit, "Good Experiences for the Pre-School Child at Home and at School," at J. L. Hudson company April 28 to May 3.

Boat Show People's Column Praises Racial Statement of B'harm Clergymen To Open Feb. 22

The most complete array of pleasure craft and marine equipment ever assembled under one roof in Michigan will be displayed at the 1958 Detroit boat show, Feb. 22-Mar. 2, in the Detroit armory.

The entire 300,000 square feet of floor space available in the huge building, 15,000 W. Eight Mile road near Northland center, will be devoted to the show.

Attendance at the ninety-day event is expected to exceed last year's 124,000. Michigan, with its 37,000 miles of shore line, thousands of lakes, and hundreds of miles of navigable rivers, is fast becoming one of the most marine-minded states in the nation. Indicative is the outboard motor ownership now estimated at 392,000. Only State boasting a greater total is New York.

All types of fiberglass, metal, and wood pleasure craft will be on view at the show, from deluxe cabin cruisers and sailing yachts to canoes and punts.

The newest V-type, in-line, and radial gasoline and diesel-fueled outboard motors will compete for interest with the latest high-horsepower inboards.

ALSO EXPECTED to attract wide attention will be exhibits of boat trailers, boat kits, marine hardware, paints, and boat accessories.

The U. S. Navy will display a huge helicopter, recently assigned to the Detroit area to carry out air-sea rescue missions.

The U. S. Army corps of engineers exhibit will show work being done to improve channels, jetties, and protected harbor entrances in Michigan waters.

Representatives of other federal and local agencies will be on hand to answer questions on boat safety, navigation, fire prevention, and the like.

Action-packed sound and color motion pictures on boating, water skiing, and other water activities will be shown free in a 500-seat theatre inside the Armory to those attending the show.

Hundreds of model yachts, built by both youths and adults, will be displayed. Two completely equipped few men of learning, nor is it of good morals because it contains good women—if the rest of the population also be not well-to-do, or healthful, or intelligent, or of good morals.

"The common people in the class most to be considered in the structure of civilization. Moreover, in proportion as any community in the organization of its society or in the development of its institutions lays emphasis on its rich men, or its few cultivated men, it is likely to forget and to neglect its very foundations."

IT IS NOT these small classes that really make the community what it is, that determine the condition of its health, the soundness of its social structure, its economic value and its level of life. The security and the soundness of the whole body are measured at last by the condition of its weakest part."

This passage contains a pointed message for Birmingham, Michigan, in February, 1958.

Planners Studying Rezoning Petitions
Two rezoning requests were forwarded to the Birmingham plan board this week.

Petitioner Marian J. Smith asked for business zoning for six residential lots on Adams south of Hazel. She points out adjoining neighbors are the Adams fire station and a new service station.

F. H. Henkel has asked for multiple zoning of a single residence at 1080 W. Maple, immediately west of the city's water park. Planners will study both requests, and recommend action to the city commission.
