

Township Library Lists New Books

BLOOMFIELD WEST — West Bloomfield township library has announced that new books are now available.

Fiction books include: "South" by Java Heat and Alister Maclean, "The Green Kingdom" by Rachel Maddux, "They Came to Cordura" by Glendon Swarthout, "The Windup Woman" by Anna Seton.

Others in the non-fiction category are: "First Blood" by W. A. Suranberg, "Please Don't Eat the Daisies" by Jean Kerr, "Selling Illustrated" by John O'Rear and "How to Make Money Make Money" by Henry Gellerman.

Ten-age books include "Cherleading" by Netti Lokon, "Guido to Dating" by Joyce Jackson and "College Bound" by Samuel Brownstein.

The library has also added new records. Some of them are: "Encyclopedia of Jazz on Records," "Belafonte Sings of the Caribbean," "Bolero" by Andre Kostelanetz and "Handel's Messiah" conducted by Hermann Scherchen.

Have You Met . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Neil B. Michie of 6936 Castle Drive who moved Feb. 1 from Hazel Park to their new home in Orchard Hills. Their four children are Marilyn, 9, Jeanne, 6, Francine, 5, and Robert, 1. A fifth member of the family is due in June. Michie is general manager of the association of Hazel Park which meets every Thursday evening for gym and swimming and once a month for business. The club also takes two canoe trips a year. Mrs. Michie has taken courses in numerous do-it-yourself fields including millinery, cake decorating, and upholstery and wood-working. She also takes piano lessons and considers millinery her first choice as a hobby.

Fire in Bloomfield

BLOOMFIELD—A small fire at the home of John C. Glimmer, 7333 Bingham road, was extinguished by township firemen Wednesday morning.

Warm Heart Of Southfield Warms Home

SOUTHFIELD — Chivalry isn't dead in Southfield township.

The township board voted Feb. 11 to buy a half ton of coal for Mrs. Frances Mathers, 23486 Alameda, an 80-year-old retired music teacher, who was burning her last chunk of coal.

Eugene Swam, township supervisor explained to the trustees that Mrs. Mathers' house was old and assistance—enough to feed herself and her 38 or so cats, but not enough to keep the house warm. So the board voted to buy her coal for her.

This is the third half ton the township has supplied this winter. The township maintains an emergency relief fund of about $2,000, Swam said, because it "doesn't want anyone to go hungry or cold in Southfield."

Usually, Swam said, the money is spent for fuel or groceries to tide people by until they can apply for and receive other help.

Swanson, Costello Seek Mayor Post

SOUTHFIELD—Two men have announced their candidacy for mayor of the proposed city of Southfield. They are Donald L. Swanson and Thomas Costello.

A mayor will be seated if the voters approve the charter at their election in April.

Both Costello and Swanson were members of the commission that drafted the charter.

Begins Program

BEVERLYS — Gretchen Guck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Guck, 2527 Buckingham, has started work for a Columbia, Mo., business office in connection with a college program. She is a student at Christian college, a junior college for women in Columbia.

Vote

of time before they'll have to spend even more to build the storm sewers, he said.

COUNCILMAN David Anderson was appalled at the voting figures. He pointed out that little more than a year ago the city had registered voters attended the three special meetings the council held to explain the plan and that the city had 56 per cent voted.

"If you're real generous," Anderson said, "and figure that each person that attended the meetings represented not only himself but also his spouse that makes 112 per cent. Could the other 44 per cent have voted 'in the dark'?" he wondered.

LATHRUP'S city council members were discouraged Tuesday night. They said they felt they had presented the city with the best possible plan—expensive, yes, but not extravagant.

No opposition was apparent until the last week before the election when a flood of anti-swer literature began to inundate Lathrup residents. The council was plainly put out that this opposition, not apparent at the meetings, especially to answer questions, began when it was all but too late to answer charges.

The opposition opened fire last Thursday. A group that called itself the "Committee for Better Government" mailed a package to all Lathrup residents except most of the council members and the press.

THE MAIL brought a 25-by-10-inch map labeling the council's plan as "pig-nose-poke." Outside literature, replete with italics, screamed "Vote No!" and asked, "Why not wait?" The self-styled "broadside" charged that the council had gone ahead without the approval of Ayres, Lewis, Norris & May, the engineering firm retained by the city.

The mailing was endorsed by 29 signatures, including seven combinations of husband and wife. Conspicuously absent were the names of Charles and Louise Kelley, Lathrup subdividers. The consensus in Lathrup was that they wrote the letter, although the Kelleys denied it.

DEEPLY HURT, the council countered Friday with a letter of its own. Sent to all Lathrup homes, it included copies of telegrams from Pat Harn, storm sewer engineers, and Ayres, Lewis, Norris & May. Both wires assured "Why not wait?" and the self-styled "broadside" charged that the council had gone ahead without the approval of Ayres, Lewis, Norris & May, the engineering firm retained by the city.

Next in Lathrup's mailboxes was a letter from the Lathrup Village subdivision, summarizing the proposals and providing answers to some of the questions which had been raised.

The Committee for Good Government, an organization active in Lathrup affairs for about three years, followed with a letter of its own. This one charged that the "Better Government" group was trying to capitalize on the Good Government group's excellent reputation.

"WE WOULD BE derelict in our obligation to you," the letter said, "if we failed to expose this plagiarist."

The committee, of which George Jaquillard is chairman, suggested "Kelley's Creek" or "Lake Louise" as names appropriate to the village if the bond issue failed.

Jaquillard and 25 other residents who signed this letter asked whether the "better government" committee opposed the issue because "the subdivider has been unable to have undeveloped lands included in the plans so that they would be improved at taxpayers' expense."

Another letter was delivered to every Lathrup home Saturday. This one was from Vernon M. Peck, "a private citizen and taxpayer." He said he felt "compelled to express his faith in the council." He urged that voters "keep faith with those of our council who spend so much of their time working for all of us."

The last word came from Louise Lathrup-Kelley (Mrs. Charles). She urged "Vote no—positively no!" Mrs. Kelley, who is in the real estate business, said the bond issue would hurt the resale value of homes. The theme of her three-page letter was that there was no hurry and that voters should delay until further proposals were explored.

Colonial Estates Social Briefs

February 10, Steward Henderson of Hickory Grove road and Arthur Hindle of Colonial Way attended the Suburban Home Owners association meeting at home of Gayle Oakland Hills country club.

It was the annual election of officers, and Henderson was elected vice-president, representing Colonial Estates.

Civic Boards Eye Charter

SOUTHFIELD—Southfield's proposed city charter received a preliminary hearing Saturday as about 24 members of various civic boards reviewed sections pertaining to their work and also made general suggestions.

Represented were Southfield board of education, Southfield township board, zoning board, board of appeals, parks and recreation commission, Southfield civil service commission and the police and water departments.

The charter commission then met Sunday to make minor charter revisions in line with suggestions presented. The changes, township did not spread to the empty tank.

Fire Damages Truck

BLOOMFIELD—A gas leak apparently caused the fire which caused $500 damage to a Torrence oil company cab last Wednesday at Cranbrook and Maple roads, Township firemen extinguished the blaze which wrecked the cab but not spread to the empty tank.

Great Books Course Will Train Leaders

In order that more great books courses may be offered in this area, a leadership training course is being offered at the Detroit Main Library to train more moderators. John H. Bryant, 3021 Middlebury, is president of a discussion group meeting now at the Baldwin public library in Birmingham.
