WHY?

Is Parting Such Sweet Sorrow?

It may have been to Romeo and Juliet, but to many, a social problem is how best to speed the parting guest without "saying good-night till it be morrow."

Leave taking was always ceremonious. Primitive Africans blew on each other's hand as parting. The host said, "May no snake bite you." Guest replied, "I shall take care." Then they whooped and bawled cautions, promises and invitations until out of sight and earshot. It doesn't sound so different, hereabouts, at three o'clock in the morning.
