will give you the opportunity to meet people.
Above all, give it your attention now, work at it and then enjoy the satisfaction of mixing with other people confidently.

What about pick-up dates? Are they all right?

A pick-up date is when your date is a complete stranger. The dates usually are made at the theater or on the streets, when a conversation is started and a date is set.

The panel feels that pick-up dates are dangerous because the girl's safety is not assured, and in the boy's case, his reputation might not be helped by going on a pick-up.

Another reason that pick-up dates are not so desirable is because almost everyone frowns upon them and considers them a cheap way of meeting people.

Only an unattractive person would ask for, or accept, a pick-up date, as the popular person would be desirable and would have their choice of dates.

A person's reputation is vulnerable to gossip when he goes on a pick-up date. All this favors the negative point of view.

The only advantage in pick-up dates is that you can meet some Tom, Dick, or Harry. Some feel that going to show, party or basketball game with a boy or girl you don't know, but who is one of your friends' friends, is a form of pick-up.

Under these circumstances your date should include a bunch of friends. This panel feels it is imperative.

There are a few ways of legitimately meeting people that are strangers. Some of these are the "mixers" at Birmingham High and parish and school teen open houses.
