Local Gas Supply Increase Possible With New Pipeline

Birmingham area residents will receive a boost in gas supply along with other outstate Michigan areas if a proposal now before the Federal Power Commission is approved.

The FPC has been asked by the Trunkline Gas Co. of Houston, Texas, to authorize construction of a new 26-inch main line from Tuscola, Illinois to the Indiana-Michigan border to bring a new supply of natural gas to Consumers Power Co. The program's cost is estimated at $81.5 million. Trunkline obtains its gas from Texas and Louisiana, and the pipeline proposed would be an extension and expansion of its main line which extends 1,200 miles from McAllen, Texas, to Tuscola, Ill.

Trunkline proposes to supply the gas from the new pipeline solely to Consumers, which provides natural gas service to 400,000 customers in 286 outstate Michigan communities. Consumers, which has more than 100,000 customers who are asking for permission to use natural gas for space heating purposes, will construct a new 26-inch gas main from the Indiana line to a point near Plymouth, where Trunkline gas will enter the Consumers' distribution system for transmission to the areas served with gas by the company.

According to President Dan E. Karn of Consumers, the company anticipates initial deliveries of the new supply of gas in late 1959.
