

Kathy's Korner

So, she buys the children's silence by giving magic properties to Paul's bed-knob.

When Paul twists the knob into his bed and wishes, he takes Charles, Carrie and himself on exciting adventures; but some of them don't turn out the way they were planned.

FOR INSTANCE, one jaunt landed them in the police station. Until their crotchety old aunt finds out about it and sends them all back home, they have a marvelous time. They know their great fun with Miss Price was over, but Paul still has the bed-knob, just in case.

The story of The Magic Bed-Knob will attract everyone from 7 to 70, because of the nonsensical way it is written; and yet, you can just see the places described in the book, she tells about them so exactly. It is one of my favorite "just for fun" books.

Yours Truly

o former city manager Donald C. Egbert. This tree will be decorated at Christmas time in place of the old one to avoid an interruption in tradition.

There will be a large patio in the center, to which a pool and sculpture may be added. This is all part of an endeavor to beautify the Civic Center formed by the Baldwin Public Library, the Municipal Building and Shain Park.

ON THE DAY that the old Norway spruce is felled, a cutaway section will be published and displayed either in the public library, municipal building, or a school. The tree itself will be made into lumber and may be used in a memorial to the tree.

Although we will all be sorry to see it go, 70 years is a long time for a Norway spruce to flourish under city conditions, and it has been living on borrowed time for several years.

Books

must choose between two ways of life and two men she loves, one French and one English.

Beric, the son of a Roman soldier, was another slave. In THE OUTCAST Rosemary Sutcliffe recounts his adventures in 500 B. C. He was the only survivor of a shipwreck off the coast of Britain. When the native tribe which raised him cast him out, he tried to join the Roman legion but is taken prisoner instead.

Sold on the block and condemned to row in the galleys for life, Beric feels all "the sense of utter helplessness, of being caught and caged and lost to all eternity." Somehow his spirit never dies completely. He survives horror after horror before he finally comes home to Britain.

THORBY WAS captured in a space ship and sold many times before he was bought by Basim the "ripple in Jubbalpore, capital of the Nine Worlds. CITIZEN OF THE GALAXY by Robert Heinlein is an exceptionally inventive piece of science fiction.

Thorby discovers Basim is much more than a crippled beggar. He is a spy in a vast network attempting to stamp out the slave trade in the universe. Thorby's identity is lost, but Basim thinks he is of Terra (Earth) and Thorby's long journey home is full of excitement and danger.

THE FORGOTTEN DAUGHTER by Caroline Dale Snedeker tells of Chloe, another slave whose past is a mystery. Her life is one of privation and loneliness until she meets Aulis, son of her master. Their idyllic love story is unfolded against the background of Rome in its great days.

All of these books are available in the young moderns department of the Baldwin public library.
