Insects Issue Speed Advice

That fable about flies streaking 320 m.p.h. is for the birds. Top speed for insects is about 35 m.p.h. in short sprints, according to a British professor of entomology. And you'll never catch a horse fly going faster than 15 m.p.h. he says.
Even if insects could travel faster, they'd have horse sense enough not to, says lovers claim. Too many dangers from traveling fast they point out.
The same is true on the highway—traveling fast is pretty dangerous there, too. But a lot of humans apparently don't have the sense of insects when it comes to driving a car.

SPPEEDING IS a factor in about out of 10 fatal motor vehicle accidents, according to the National Safety Council.
You don't necessarily have to exceed the posted limit to be speeding, the council points out. Observe the limit in a 25 m.p.h. zone during a blizzard and you may end up with a ticket.
"Speeding," the council says, increases the likelihood of an accident. The greater the speed the less time you have to react in emergencies. It takes longer, naturally, to stop a speeding automobile than one moving slowly.
"Besides, speeding is costly. It can cost you money—and maybe your life."
