Safety Factor, Too

Wrought iron gives an air of elegance to the exterior of this modest home at small expense. Such wrought iron railings, which add a safety factor where danger of falls exists, can be used on exterior staircases, aunter porches, balconies and even swimming pools.

Wrought Iron Is Versatile

Ornamental wrought iron railings and columns find many uses, both inside and outside, on old and new structures.

Wrought iron railings may be used on both exterior and interior staircases and balconies, around porches, stoops, landings and platforms, "airing porches," swimming pools, etc., wherever an added touch of beauty is desired or danger of falls exists.

Columns are manufactured in flat and corner types, the latter consisting of two flat columns at right angles to each other with a common corner "leg."

Properly constructed, wrought iron columns have ample strength to permit their use as structural members for supporting porch roofs, breezeways, balconies, canopies, door awnings, patio covers, etc.

style of architecture, from the very simple to the most ornate.

IN MOST instances, the homeowner's personal preference will dictate the selection of a suitable style and very frequently the salesman will have made a study of the suitability of the various styles and will be able to offer helpful suggestions if called upon.

Grade Firmly

Earth around trees and shrubs should be graded firmly, edges trimmed and allowance made for execution of easy, close-up trimming.

The population of Japan is approximately 90 million.

Frequent, Close Mowing Harmful

The turf on many lawns is ruined by too frequent and too close mowing, say turf specialists at Michigan State University.

This is especially true of shady lawns, where the competition of trees for water and plant food is great, and on open lawns which are injured by drought in summer. Better turf will result if such lawns are mowed less often. Maintain such lawn grasses as merion and Kentucky bluegrass and red fescue at a height of 1 1/2 to 2 inches in open, sunny areas. Keep red fescue and rough bluegrass grown in shade at 2 to 2 1/2 inches.

KEEP YOUR LAWN mowed as recommended until about June 15, then put the lawn mower away. Bring it out only if summer conditions are so favorable that the grass is likely to become unsightly.
