'Hi-Life' Uses Wealth Of Whirling Nonsense

WING LAKE — A particularly facetious and sometimes side-splitting cartoon, "Hi Life," which has appeared in The Birmingham Eccentric for the past two years is created by Tom Manhard, 17, who will be a senior in Bloomfield Hills high school next year.

Tom, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen J. Manhard of Oak Grove drive, Wing Lake, started drawing as a small child and has continued to pursue art all his life. At 15 he drew his first cartoons and since has contributed many published art accomplishments for the school publications.

He drew for the "Hillman," the Bloomfield Hills high school newspaper, did the cover for the January issue of "Hillcrest," this year and created the cover for the Variety Show program, "The Speakeasy."

TOM THINKS UP his own cartoon captions mainly from a wealth of whirling nonsense that seems to be constantly surging through his brain, plus ideas from incidents, other cartoons and tidbits from interesting conversations and situations he observes in public.

From interesting conversations and situations he observes in public. Tom also enjoys writing and will be the Bloomfield Hills high school correspondent to The Birmingham Eccentric next year. As a hobby he writes short stories and has even accomplished a few reprints from national publications to prove. However, he views this as all the more challenge to try for.

Much of his spare time is spent making his own models of planes and cars and he also enjoys water sports and sailing.

DRAMATIC INTERESTS him and he captured the male lead in the January play this year, "The Night of January 13th." Ultimately he intends to pursue the field of advertising journalism and art this summer secured a full time job with The Phoenix, Seattle. He does some writing, cartooning and copy work.
