B'ham Man Heads Bar Association

Frederick G. Buesser, Jr., became the 123rd President of the 3000 member Detroit Bar association last week at the annual election meeting...

Sharpening A Point

Getting ready to argue for a one-house Michigan legislature, David E. Parish (left), es, boys wore white shirts, ties and suit coats to be delegates to the all-day convention last Thursday.

They Took Their Politics Seriously

Birmingham high school students sailed the Michigan ship of state slowly and cautiously last Thursday when they held a mock state constitutional convention. Conservative winds prevailed while youth stayed at the helm. The 104 civic students who spent a day as delegates to the mock most passed a right to work law, voted to limit the governor's term of office to two four-year terms, and turned thumbs down on legalized lotteries to raise tax monies.

Relaxes at the Bench

Relaxing beside the bench from which he presided for the last time last week, Birmingham Municipal Court Judge John J. Gafliff gave three prescriptions for a long, active life. "Hard work, a variety of interests, and a sense of humor," said the judge.

From Where The Judge Sat, City Has Changed

Birmingham won't be the same without Judge John J. Gafliff presiding on the bench in the city's municipal court. And it's not the same Birmingham it was when that wise gentleman came here in 1917.

Things have even changed in the 12 years since Judge Gafliff, who lives at 651 Frank, Birmingham, was first appointed justice of the peace here.

For one thing, says the tall, bespectacled judge, presiding over Birmingham's municipal court is becoming almost a full-time job.

Now ADDED to the Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning court sessions is the paper and other work resulting from Birmingham's increasing traffic cases.

And a large percent of the extra work comes, says the judge, "because so many young men are caught with beer in their cars. The police officer sees a car weaving around the street. And when he stops it, he finds young men under 21 with beer in their possession."

This reporter has seen the police records on many such cases. Charged with being minors in possession of alcoholic beverages, the youths, most of them 18 to 20, are frequently jailed for the night, released on bond the following day to appear later before the judge.

THE YOUTHS DON'T like to tell him where they get the beer, says Judge Gafliff. "But," he adds, "all the kids know where to get it. They pay a man a dollar to go into a store and make the purchase for them."

"Asked what he thought about the laws that forbid 18 to 21-year-olds from drinking beer, the judge clasped his thin hands together, the way he often does in court, and said, 'I'm not going to stand up and say at what age a boy should be allowed to drink.'"

"BUT I KNOW one sure thing," he continued, "and that is they should not drink and drive a car." Only a few cars drive on the streets of Birmingham when Judge Gafliff came here from Detroit 41 years ago.

"It was just a little country village then," he said. "And in those days you could come downtown Detroit anyway you wanted to. Now you have to dress up." Back in the country village days the judge was practicing law in Detroit and acting as the village attorney. He became general attorney for the Grand Trunk Western railroad in 1946, and retired from that post in 1948.

Elected as officers to serve with President Buesser were Judge Charles Rubiner who was promoted from second vice president to first vice president; Robert C. Winter, formerly secretary and now second vice president; James Moore, elected secretary; and Director A. D. Rueggesser, elected treasurer.

FRANK D. BUESSER, Jr. is a distinguished lineage is brought to the board in the person of the new president. His maternal grandfather was Dr. F. Buesser, L. Carpenter, was for many years a justice of the Michigan supreme court. Prior to his was a circuit judge and earlier a partner in the law firm of Stevenson, Carpenter, Eaton, Long, Gust and Kenney.

His new president's father was the late Dr. F. Buesser, a David Whitney building internal medicine specialist who died in 1957.

President Buesser gained his education in this area, having taken his preparatory school work at Detroit Country Day school, his arts degree from the University of Michigan in 1937 and his law degree from Ann Arbor in 1940.

He was admitted to the bar in 1948 and since 1948 has been a member of the law firm of Chase, Goodenough & Buesser, 4155 Penobscot building.

FOR MORE than 10 years he has been the author of "Brethren of the Bar," a widely read and quoted column appearing in "The Detroit Lawyer," the association monthly publication. The column devotes itself to lawyers as people and the writing of it, which has brought the author wide acclaim, fulfills an early college ambition acquired when he was the columnist on The Michigan Daily at Ann Arbor. His aim then was to become "the most read lawyer's column in America." His friends insist that he may yet attain that goal as well.

Inducted into the army as a private in April 1944, he rose to company commander of military police in July 1945 and was released from active duty in August 1946.

BUESSER is governor of the University Michigan club of Detroit, trustee of the Michigan Delta foundation of which he was president 1951-53, trustee of Detroit Country Day school and president of the University of Michigan alumni fraternities council in Detroit. He is a director of the Detroit Pistons basketball team, legal counsel to the Wayne County Medical society, Detroit Country Day school and the Ohio China Co. He is a member of the American Bar Association, American Judicature society, the Thomas M. Cooley club, the Detroit Athletic club and the Huron River Hunting and Fishing club.

His extra-legal interests center around the 22-foot Chris Craft Sportsman ferries the family back and forth to their Russel Island summer retreat. With his wife, former Betty Renal, and their three children, Buesser resides at 3346 West Boulevard. His wife, the children are Frederick G. III, 17; William Ronald, 14 and Anne Alexander, 10.

2 Life Savers
A blood transfusion helped five-year-old Janet Dewey recover from severe hemorrhaging after her tonsillectomy last week. Consequently her father, the Rev. Robert D. Dewey, plans to donate blood on Tuesday, June 17, to the community blood bank which will be set up at the Congregational church of Birmingham. Also donating that day will be Richard E. Olin (standing), who showed Janet the one-gallon pin he was recently presented by the American Red Cross. Olin, of 457 Southlawn, Birmingham, gives five times a year. When he contributes blood June 17, he will have completed a second gallon. "Tell people it doesn't hurt," said Olin. Anyone wishing to make an appointment for the blood bank should call Mrs. William Busch, 400 N. Cranbrook, Birmingham.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh
The Woodchuck Wouldn't "Chuck"
Lady called up our newspaper and asked how to get a woodchuck out of her garage. I referred her to young Chip Wilkins, our Field and Wildlife Editor. "That's easy," says Chip. "Just roll some bread into pellets, and make a trail of them leading out of the garage." Next day she called Chip again. "You sure are smart," she too-ed. "To know a woodchuck will follow a trail of breadcrumbs. Now I've got two woodchucks in the garage!"
