WHAT DOCTORS SAY ABOUT

- Leg Length • Nailbiting • Baby's Cry • Repeat Polio

Q. Can one leg be shorter than the other without causing noticeable limp?

A. Yes, but if one leg is very much shorter the person will walk with a peculiar gait, even a little difference in leg length can cause trouble. When one leg is shorter than the other the pelvis tilts. Leg and back muscles are put under stress and become painful. If the condition is not corrected the spine will be pulled out of line causing curvature with shoulder drop. Doctors watch for uneven leg length in children and, when necessary, prescribe corrective shoes. They also consider unequal leg length when examining complain of having had "bad backs" or leg trouble for many years.

Q. How can nailbiting be stopped?

A. Nailbiting is a sign of nervousness and tension. Overcome these and nailbiting stops. Nagging and punishment won't help and it does no good to apply bitter drugs to the nails.

Q. Can you tell whether a baby is sick by the way he cries?

A. Sometimes, but watch out for the baby who is too sick to cry. The child who looks sick.

but just whimpers may be in serious trouble. Babies can get sick in a hurry. If there is any doubt, call a doctor.

Q. Can polio strike the same person twice?

A. Yes. There are three main types of polio virus, and disease due to one will not necessarily induce resistance against the others. There are reports in the medical literature of second attacks of polio.

Material in the MEDICAL MIRROR is based on various scientific publications and does not necessarily reflect the opinion of all doctors. The diagnosis and treatment of disease requires the skill and knowledge which only a physician can apply by personally attending the patient.

Letters will be answered in these columns.
