Mrs. Fred Cornett Hosts St. Patrick's Day Party

Sure and it 'twas an afternoon for the "wearing of the green" at the St. Patrick's party Mrs. Fred Cornett gave in her Hickory Heights drive home on March 17.

As friends and neighbors passed over the threshold there was a feeling of staccato on the emerald green for a few short hours. The interior was decorated with arrangements of green carnations, roses and chrysanthemums.

A shamrock dessert and coffee followed the afternoon of conversation, bingo and a champagne punch. Each of the 20 guests leaving had a prize tucked under her arm. Among the guests were Mrs. Jay Von Zelen and Mrs. Dore Hopkirk of Birmingham.

The Thayer Cowmans of Limerick drive motored to South Bend, Ind., over the weekend of March 15, for the opening of the ninth annual Michigan regional art exhibition.

The 575 works in the two state (Michigan - Indiana) exhibition were judged by three nationally recognized art experts. Among the 89 selected to hang at the South Bend art center from March 16 through April 6, was a glaucous painting done by Mrs. Cowman.

As guests entered the Charwood drive home of the Edward Smiths March 15 for a "spring time party," they were overwhelmed by the fragrance and beauty throughout the house. There were trays, daffodils, fresh tea and pussy-willows everywhere. Decorated paper kites added to the feeling of spring.

The evening of fun centered around cocktails, dancing and a buffet supper. Before the party was over the scene changed to the Ramberg drive home of the Clifford Rolands where an old player piano was put to use.

On the party scene were the Tom Lukes, the David DeWitts, the Clifford Rolands, and the John Vogts, of Charwood subdivision. Others were the Robert Moss, the Lyle Smiths, the Paul Mochles, Fred Moss and Mrs. Marie Butler.

The Douglas Carnegie home on South Reading drive was "Marly Junpin" on the evening of March ing their months' stay in Florida. The Pan American at Miami Beach, Fla., was their home during the vacation. Much time was spent basking in the sun and enjoying the surf and sand. In the evenings they explored the many restaurants.

Visiting the Keys was a "must" before going on to New York for a couple of days. In New York they saw "Auntie Mame" and did some sight-seeing before returning home.

Easter vacation came early for Greg Cowman of Limerick drive this year as he accompanied his dad, Thayer Cowman, on a trip through Ohio and Indiana.

Their first stop was Grandville, Ohio, where they visited the George Cowmans, parents of Cowman. A brother, Tom Cowman of New York, was also visiting.

They toured Denison university before going to Columbus, Ohio, where they visited Mrs. Cowman's parents, the Carl F. Brooks.

Notre Dame stadium and the grounds in South Bend, Ind., were another stop before their trip homeward.

The ladies auxiliary of St. Stevens Episcopal church met March 17 at the Anslow lane home of Mrs. William Beesey.

Mrs. Diantha Higgins, director of religious education at Christ Church Cranbrook, gave a talk after a St. Patrick's dessert and coffee. The 11 attending were all of the North Adams area.

The Richard Fialas and their children, Betty and Margaret, have moved to Joplin, Mo., from their home on Orchard Hill drive. Fiala is affiliated with Ackerline, and was transferred there by the company.

The new Eastover subdivision west of Eastover school have new residents moving in these days. The William Kaufmans of South Reading are enjoying their new home. They were married last November.

Kaufman is from Detroit and Mrs. Kaufman is from Houston, Tex. Mrs. Kaufman's daughter, Jacquelyn York, 15, is finishing this school semester in Kansas.

Kaufman is manager of general Electric Apparatus Service, in Detroit. Fording and landscaping will take the place of hobbies during the next year.

The William DeVaults are newcomers to S. Reading road. They are formerly of Royal Oak. Their two children are Nicole, 4, and Dannelle, 12 months. DeVault is vice president and sales manager of Ted Prodnets, Royal Oak. A-
