Planners Reject Bid for Business At Hunter Corner

A bid to secure business zoning for a block of property bounded by Hunter, Oakland, Lawndale and Madison was turned down by the Birmingham planning board last week at its regular meeting.

Planners said they could see no reason for changing a previous recommendation to the city commission that the property remain zoned for multiple family or apartment use.

The petition was brought by owners Esther G. Barton, Mary Paul and James P. Cummiskey, Jr., who cited a potential loss of reburn on the property from the multiple zoning.

CITY PLANNER Herbert Herzberg said multiple residences there would allow a return considered sufficient for a proper profit on the investment.

The planning board also agreed to recommend B-2 zoning for eight lots on Bowers street at Elm. The zoning would allow storage of new automobiles on three of the lots, as desired by the nearby Harold Turner agency. The dealership is considering purchase of the property.

Planners heard objections from abutting property owners to the rezoning of lots at what would be the extension of Davis street near Pierce school.

Owners of the lots seek rezoning from single to multiple family classification. The matter was postponed until the plan board's May meeting.

Eton Break-In

Birmingham police blamed juveniles for the break-in and damage at the building at Eton park over the weekend. An estimated $75 damage was done to a door and window. Nothing was taken.

B'ham School Census Takers To Contact Homes

To get an accurate population figure for the entire Birmingham school district, the annual school census enumerators this year will list adults as well as children.

The census, to be taken the last 20 days in May, is to determine the number of children in each age group in the district.

Results give the school board an index of possible service to be rendered by the schools. Census figures provide the basis for planning building, instruction and financial needs.

Sewing Contest Set

Students will model their entries next Wednesday at 7:30 a.m. when the Singer sewing shop, 177 W. Maple, Birmingham, holds its annual adult sewing contest. Participants will be women in classes instructed by Mrs. Ruth Hawkins, the local contest is part of the firm's $125,000 national contest.

Enumerators will contact every family. All information, required by state law, will be confidential. The census takers will wear badges signed by the superintendent of schools, Dr. Dwight B. Ireland.

Census takers will give information about kindergarten roundups to parents of children who will enter school next fall.

Furniture Design Brings Award To B'ham Man

For his modular storage system of walnut drawers and cabinets, Hugh Acton, of 588 Brookside, Birmingham, local designer, was one of four winners in a recent furniture competition sponsored by the American institute of decorators.

Acton's winning designs are being shown by Scott-Shuptrine Co., Inc., Birmingham.

The designer began interpreting Detroit's production methods into furniture manufacturing four years ago while studying for his master's degree at Cranbrook Academy of Art.
