

That Early Bird Wouldn't Know Today's Cousin

Turkeys which strut our American barnyards today probably wouldn't recognize the gobblers that provided the Pilgrims with their first Thanksgiving feast.

The resemblance between the birds is comparable to the "before and after" pictures which accompany most body-building advertisements.

The pilgrim bird was a skinny, scraggly, long-legged athlete who gobbled up the meat on his bony frame by scooting through the woods at a rapid clip.

TODAY'S TURKEY is an over-stuffed, full-breasted beauty with a much larger body and short, heavy legs. Exercise for modern adult turkeys consists of walking around the barnyard at a slow, deliberate pace.

Possibly the only joy a turkey raiser gets from a turkey is counting the money after he gets rid of the bird. For turkeys have frail constitutions, miserable dispositions, and must be coddled and coaxed to market.

Trouble starts when mother turkey lays her eggs, and the father turkey does his best to search them out and break them. If the turkey gets beat, he's been pecked or stomped into oblivion. It will hatch in 28 days, after being kept at a temperature of 100 degrees—no more, no less.

THEN THIS little turkey gets the vitamin treatment and is carefully guarded until ready for market between the age of four to seven months.

Why do farmers raise turkeys? The answer might be in the U. S. department of agriculture report that last year turkey raising amounted to more than a 300 million dollar business.

Are You Average?

The average American eats about six pounds of turkey a year. Sixty per cent is eaten at Thanksgiving and Christmas. You're proving the statistics if you eat one and four-fifths pounds of meat at Thanksgiving and the same amount at Christmas.
