Stage Stars Balance Seesaw in Life, Too

By BETTY PAYSNER
Special Writer

Balancing a seesaw is tricky. But Ruth Roman and Jeffrey Lynn are strikingly suited as the "Two For The Seesaw" of human relations.

The daughter of Boston carnival operators and the New England farm boy who once wanted to be president are in the William Gibson play at the Schubert through Saturday.

She is small, dark, and curvaceous. He is tall, light, and spare. She sparkles with the outgoing warmth of Italian-Jewish ancestry. He reflects the quiet charm of Swedish settlers.

Nov. 28, 1956 THE BIRMINGHAM (MICH.) ECCENTRIC 5-A mented after earning fame in "The Window" and "Champion" her earliest starring movies. "It takes at least 10 years to establish stardom after first fame."

"I want to be linked with the first-rate actors of our time," said Lynn. After more than 20 years as a stage and screen star he feels: "I want people to come see me act because they enjoyed and remembered my last performance."

"I almost chose a government career," he continued. "Like many immigrants, my father instilled civic consciousness in his children. As a kid I actually wanted to be president. And after service in the Second World War, I considered government work in international relations. But between these two stages, I taught high school English and directed the school's drama club. And acting, itself a form of communication, became most important to me."

Thousands of people read The Eccentric Classified Ads. So remember, if you want to sell that hard-to-get-right-of article, advertise it in the Want Ad section of The Birmingham Eccentric.

"Jeffrey is a wonderful actor and friend," Miss Roman remarked. "He's very cultured. And always a gentleman. He's a much-loved person."

And it is on a delighted audience that Ruth Roman and Jeffrey Lynn balance the seesaw.
