Pupils Pilot Study

Five Wing Lake youngsters demonstrate a rhythmic lesson from their Scott Foresman books. One of nine control groups, this fourth grade class is part of a pilot study set up by the arithmetic committee of the Bloomfield Hills elementary school system. The program, in effect in five schools, will give a comprehensive view of the new mathematical method. The study will be completed at the end of this school year. Results will determine whether or not the schools will switch books. Finding the solution to a problem are (left to right) George Walker, Bob Reynolds, Marina Bishop, Linda Beukema and Pamela Cohagen.

Motorcade Of Boosters Attend Game

By BARBARA TROY,
JOHN COUP and JEFF ZATELL.

When Pep club president Ozzie (Azzie) Sarjanian planned that motorcade to Farmington Friday, she underestimated the number of cars which would gather at Southfield to travel to Farmington. Ozzie asked Police Chief Phil Lavigne for an escort for 25 to 30 cars, but Southfield Principal Robert Hall said he stopped counting at 100 and there were many more to go.

Barb Miles and Ozzie are wearing bruises this week from a three-car pile up that tossed Barb out of the car and shook up Ozzie. On the car hung the ironical banner, "Slaughter Farmington."

Many sophomore and junior girls have been complaining of aches and pains as they hobble about the school. It isn't anything very serious, just sore muscles from practicing for the forthcoming reserve cheerleading tryouts.

"Scotch Hop," featuring WKMH disc-jockey Don McKinnon, was held in Southfield's gym last Friday evening. An all-school dance, the Scotch themed hop was sponsored by the senior. Dj McKinnon came wearing a plaid sport jacket, and sophomore Susie Kernjack sported an authentic tartan and kilt. Several alumni attended, including Mike Yoshonis, Judy Caddell, Sharon Horton, Bob Hayes, Muts McCleary, Ken Yauch and Bob Brown.

Full day sessions are scheduled to return to Southfield high sometime this week, although the exact day could not be determined ahead of time. The blue-green tile was being placed on the cafeteria floor Monday.

The school has been on 1/2-day sessions—8 a.m. to 12:47 p.m. since school began Sept. 3 because no cafeteria or other space was available where students could eat lunches. The old cafeteria is being expanded in the new construction program which will eventually add 20 new classrooms and a new auditorium.

As soon as the floor is finished the full day sessions 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. will resume.

A booklet detailing information about the City of Southfield is being prepared by 28 Southfield high students as a term project in government classes.

The booklet, which will have 200-300 pages when printed in May 1959, will deal specifically with Southfield's geography, history, economics, schools, government and social aspects. It will be entitled, "The Story of Southfield."

The project will be under the supervision of instructors James Owens and Daniel Julien, who believe the students will "gain experience in research and journalism."

Sherol Riedel, senior, has been chosen as editor. She will be assisted by Lois Zumberg.

"Look to the sun, and the shadows will fall behind." Southfield's class of '59 has selected an inspirational motto to accompany their mint green and white colors and white carnation flower.
