

Comparatively few people achieve that mental condition wherein, through quiet searching and inner inspirational yearning, the blessings of "tuning to the infinite" visit one. The evening sunset occurs daily, and so often paints sky and clouds with its colorful beams—yet so few people acquire the habit of seeing it, and then thrilling to its pictures.

When It Comes to School Taxes, They Get Their Money's Worth

The block of Cole street between Torry and Eton road has an unusual distinction. It has more children than any other single block in the city of Birmingham. According to the Birmingham board of education, between 1602 and 1999 Cole there are 127 children under 20 years of age. A breakdown shows 79 youngsters of school age—5 to 18 years old. Two of these are in the service, the rest are in school. All grades between kindergarten and the 11th are represented. One day last week most of the block's young-uns gathered to pose for Birmingham Eccentric photographer Julie Candler. The result was this panoramic view of the youngsters who really give their parents their money's worth when it comes to school taxes.
