

Discuss Place Of Clinics For Child Guidance

Members of the Michigan association of child guidance clinics have some fresh ideas on the role of the child guidance clinic in the community.

Its place was discussed at the group's spring workshop in Pontiac last Thursday and Friday.

The Oakland county child guidance board was hostess to the group.

Local chairman was Mrs. Eugenia Hunter, South Oakland clinic board. Members of her staff included Mesdames Clarke F. Andrusse, A. H. Williams, Frederick Haggard, and John Naz, all of the Oakland county board.

Mesdames Nellie Morehart, Richard Morrish, Wayne Grimm and Edward Lloyd of the South Oakland clinic board, and Mrs. Edward S. Wellbeck, Birmingham child guidance clinic board, were on the committee.

ought to quadruple the amount of money allocated for welfare for the next year. In this situation, the Mayor measured up to his civic responsibilities and publicly criticized the labor leader for asking for more money than the city of Detroit could raise. Keep up the good work Louie—that's the kind of courage that'll land you in the foreman's chair over in Lansing some day perhaps.

A paragraph from a letter written by a woman subscriber to the Hot Springs (Calif.) Mountainbeams said: "I personally enjoy your paper as much as my husband."

For many years factual truth was embodied in the saying: "Money Talks!" But that was quite a spell before it succumbed to inflationary laryngitis.

What a confused society this earth would have if every person were a genius. After all, while the genius is necessary and pioneers in developing ideas, it requires the hard hands and hearts of just ordinary people to bring them into universal being.

Brandwein addressed the General Motors conference for high school teachers in August, 1958. Response to his ideas was so enthusiastic that Ireland and the school board felt the entire community would benefit in hearing him.

PARENTS OF students of all ages, faculties, the curriculum committee, Friends of the Library, AAUW, the League of Women Voters, service clubs and the general public are invited to the Monday night meeting.

Howard L. Linder, PTA president, will open the meeting and conduct a brief election of officers for the coming year. Mrs. Peter B. Loomis, president of the school board, will introduce Dr. Brandwein.
