 is president of H. A. Roseberry and Son, Inc., audio engineers in Detroit.
 Roseberry is the past president of the Franklin Community association, the Franklin village council and past commissioner of the Franklin fire department.

He is former treasurer of the Franklin Community church, chairman of the Franklin village round-up and has been active in the Village Players.

Roseberry is a member of International Radio Engineering, the Masons and the Acoustical Society of America.

He is the father of one son and two daughters and has been a resident of the township for 19 years.

Neil E. Warren, 32721 Bingham lane, Bingham Farms, and Richard O. Speir, 15590 Buckingham, Beverly Hills, are now in office on two-year trustee terms.

JAMES M. GINN, a 30-year-old attorney, is a candidate for a four-year term as justice of the peace. Ginn is a graduate of the University of Michigan and earned his law degree at Harvard.

Ginn is active in the Democratic party and is a member of the Masons, the Detroit, Michigan and American bar associations.

He has resided at 30135 Woodside, Franklin, for three years with his wife and two daughters.

THEODORE J. SURA, Southfield township's incumbent fourth-year justice of the peace, will file for that post and an interim short term.

The 42-year-old Detroit attorney is a graduate of the University of Detroit. He was a Westwood councilman when he took over justice of the peace duties in 1958.

Sura is a member of the Greenfield-Beverly Improvement association, the Lawyers committee, the United Foundation, Detroit and Michigan bar associations and Reserve Army officers association.

Sura and his wife and two sons live at 15830 Kirkshire. They have lived in Beverly Hills for eight years.

ORLAND H. ELLIS, 24600 N. Cromwell, Franklin, is running for the two-year post as justice of the peace. A Detroit attorney, 46-year-old Ellis is a graduate of the Detroit College of Law.

He is active in the Little League.

Stolen Jewelry Found in Street

BLOOMFIELD TOWNSHIP—A missing spotted jewelry valued at $400 strewn on Woodward avenue last week, according to Bloomfield township police.

The jewelry was identified as having been lost taken from the home of C. L. Watkins, 1489 E. Maple, Birmingham.

Rezoning

pared for the council when it convenes next Monday night.

It has been about a year since Mrs. Ritter first filed suit against the village for allegedly changing the zoning of her property from commercial to residential without due process of law. Several court cases have been set while attorneys attempted to unscramble confused records.

A FORMER resident and charter commission member, Mrs. Ritter has had the expressed sympathy of the council. Acknowledging that she might stand to lose part of her investment under the residential status, village officers, however, are wary of increasing commercial zones in the small village. The issue is approaching a climax since prospective buyers, George Brandstrom and Ernest Richmond, are pressing for a clarification.

The designers are presently occupying the south half of lot 25; remodeling an old store for studios and show rooms. They propose to purchase the nursery school for additional show-rooms and consultation quarters for the firm of Franklin Interiors.

Ellis scouts, boy scouts, and the Franklin Community association. Ginn is past president of the Franklin Community association and the Exchange club. He and his wife and two sons have lived in Franklin for nearly six years.

REGISTRATION TOTALS this year fell below last year's 5,742. Franklin shows a total of 1,086 voters; Bingham Farms, 226 and Beverly Hills, 4,377 for a total of 5,689.

According to Township Clerk Fannie Adams, little activity in absentee ballots and heavy cancellations due to change of address predict a light turnout from the six precincts.

Road Zone

recommended to the council that the requested change in zoning would be "reasonable" in that the planners have cited the fact that the property is at the intersection of two mile-roads and across the street from retail businesses.

2) THE REQUEST from Miller Homes, Inc., for ERO zoning for 14 lots at the southeast corner of 14-Southfield, property now zoned residential.

The planning commission has recommended that four of the lots' rezoning be allowed.

3) At 14-Southfield, zone change requests from Archie Addison, of Birmingham, for ERO in place of residential zoning for two lots. The plan commission has recommended the change.

4) Beverly 12 subdivision's request for upgrading from R-3 to R-5 for their lots near 14 Mile and Riverside.

5) A request from 12 property owners for rezoning 10 subdivision for upgrading from R-3 to R-5 for their lots near 14 Mile and Riverside.

PLANNERS have recommended the change in accordance with the development and character of the area.

Also slated for the April 7 hearing is a proposed zoning ordinance change forbidding erection of residential area fences over four feet high. The ordinance also regulates fence materials and frontyard use.

ASSESSOR Alfred Emmerling will be chairman of a committee to replenish $5000 borrowed last month from general funds for emergency road repairs.

LANING — The Michigan state highway department will hold a public hearing Wednesday, April 8 on the conversion of Southfield road from Eight Mile to Northwestern to expressway standards in Oakland county, a $4,900,000 project.

City of Detroit is the conversion of Southfield in Wayne county to an expressway, right-of-way acquired on that project is currently under way.

The public hearing will be held at 7:30 in the Southfield high school gymnasium, 24675 Lahser road, Southfield, Michigan.

At the public hearing, the highway department will present data it has prepared about the economic effect of the proposed improvement and its influence on the surrounding area as engineering and location data.

TESTIMONY will be taken from interested spectators beginning at 8 p.m. A transcript of the proceedings will be studied by the Highway Department and the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads. Final plans for the new highway are approved.

The 0.7 of a mile improvement covered by the hearing, begins at the Detroit city limits at Eight Mile road, and follows the Southfield road alignment to a junction with Northwestern highway.

When completed it will link the proposed 12-mile-long Southfield expressway in Detroit and connect with the Detroit Industrial expressway at its southern terminus.

The new expressway facility will serve as a main collection and dispersal route for traffic in and out of the Detroit area and will permit the safe channeling of large volumes of traffic onto the Detroit arterial and expressway road system.

The six-lane Southfield improvement from Eight Mile road north will be constructed on a minimum 200-foot-wide right-of-way and 12-foot-wide concrete divider strip.

Bloomfield interest in the Bloomfield Hills school board election.

Voting Monday at the township's nine precincts will be from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

20 candidates filed nominating petitions for offices in which write-in votes are expected.

A FOUR-YEAR term on the township board of review is open following the expiration on March 31 of the term of Jamie M. Martin. Also to be chosen are two constables to handle the township's paper-serving duties.

The $1-a-year township highway commissioner will have no duties, but must be elected by state law. All township road maintenance is handled by the county.

Of the three trustee candidates on Monday's ballots, incumbent Reid received the most votes in the primary. Reid, of 344 Tilbury, Birmingham, has been a trustee since 1957. He is president of property management firm.

SECOND in the primary tallying was Henry M. Hogan, Jr., 4253 W. Orchard Hill, Birmingham. Hogan is an attorney with Miller, Canfield, Paddock and Stone of Detroit and Birmingham.

Samuel Reeve ran close behind Hogan. Owner of the well-known Reeve Standard service station at Telegraph and Maple, Reeve lives at 6425 Golfview.

Mills

for the village operating expense. IN THE past there has been resistance to using the three mills on the basis that collection costs would exceed gains to income. Former councils also took particular pride in maintaining a tax-free government.

However, now that preparation is being made to assess property owners eight mills this summer for road improvements, the councilmen reasoned that all or part of the hitherto-unused three mills could be levied at the same time to govern.

Among the new items which never needed to be considered before is office space rental. Now paying $60 a month for quarters above the G. H. Dale Market, the village previously enjoyed four years of rent-free hospitality from the Franklin Community association.

That was before the fire destroyed their hall 16 months ago.

CLERICAL costs have increased as the village grows and some thought is being given to increasing the $1800 item for salaries.

With an assessed valuation of over six million dollars the council tentatively agreed on a $60,000 road budget, anticipating $18,000 from state road funds and $48,000 from the millage.

The council accepted a proposal by Giff's Engineering company Monday night to develop a master plan for road repairs, drainage, construction and maintenance. Costs for the plan and other engineering services will come out of the eight mills which may be levied for the next five years.

The four candidates were placed on Lathrup ballots by the nominating group of the Lathrup committee for good government. The committee praised their efforts toward solution of Lathrup's drainage, zoning, and sewage problems, and asked the four to run again.

According to ex-mayor Lantz L. Mackey, the committee seeks their re-election, "recognizing the value of their long experience to the city."

Junior-Senior High Construction Underway

Things are "looking up" at the site of the new Birmingham junior-senior high school recently won top award in the eighth annual competition for Better School Design sponsored by the School Executive and Educational Business magazines. It was designed by Smith, Tarapata, MacMahon, Inc., Birmingham architects.

Cullen will be assistant hostess and available any evening for "a friendly game of cards."

Dad Cullen doesn't say what he'll be doing. He did say he'll be indulging for the rest of his life to two people. The two are the former Hamilton owners—who hold the mortgage.

Cullen explains that he and his wife met the couple at The Hamilton 20 years ago, loved them and the hotel. It wasn't until last summer, after a 12-year lapse, that they renewed acquaintance.

LAST SUMMER owner Frank Waller asked Cullen why he didn't buy the hotel. "I told him we couldn't even afford the water cooler on the back porch but after months of correspondence we arrived at a mutually acceptable deal," Cullen relates.

The family have been living in Indianapolis, where Cullen has been with a grinding wheel firm, since they left Beverly Hills (see Westwood, formerly Southfield township).

I'll bet their adventure with a resort hotel would give some television script writer enough material for a five-day-a-week family situation comedy—with no summer replacement.

I can just see it—mother is beautiful, father is handsome, children are delightful. The situation comes when the children don't realize that hotel guests from out of town games of cowboys and Indians outside their rooms. Little William Rust shoots his water pistol through an open transom . . .
