

Architecture Firm Cited For Building

The architectural firm of Smith, Tarapata, MacMahon, which designed the Birmingham junior-senior high school, won the top award in the better school design competition sponsored by School Executive and Educational Business magazines.

This particular competition is considered one of the best in the school field.

THE SCHOOL itself was selected by the AIA for a special exhibit of outstanding schools in the U. S. to open in Washington D. C. this summer and for a tour of European countries later this year.

Smith, Tarapata, MacMahon received special citations from the American and Michigan associations of School Boards for the project.
