Library Is Important To B'ham Residents

How do people view their community library? As part of its observance of the second National Library Week, April 12th through 18th, Baldwin Public Library asked patrons representing various interests to describe what the library means to them. Miss Julie Lloyd, Librarian, received the following answers:

A mother, Mrs. William Jacobs, 2551 Penrose, Birmingham, says: "Whether it is catering to the eager delight of Mr. Not-Quite-Six as he renews acquaintance with such beloved characters as Mike Mulligan, Baloo or Papa Smurf or attempting to satiate the ever questioning curiosity of Mr. Nine-Croquet to stamps to Babe Ruth to electricity to who knows what next, the Library fills many needs for my children.

"Here they find fun and recreation in a story hour with books, games and records; learning skills, how to train our new puppy or make a paper plane; the pumpkins and Halloween; knowledge of innumerable subjects; and inspiration and relaxation as the magic carpet made of paper and print takes them anywhere and everywhere!" Miss Julie Borgman, Birmingham high school senior, 571 Hamilton, says: "The library has become an important place for me in finding material for themes and answers to questions given me by teachers. Papers on Buddhism, colonial fireplaces, popes, French kings, Shakespeare's theatre, and even pictures of bus routes have come from the books and magazines in the library.

"The library has become an important place for me in finding material for themes and answers to questions given me by teachers. Papers on Buddhism, colonial fireplaces, popes, French kings, Shakespeare's theatre, and even pictures of bus routes have come from the books and magazines in the library.

"SPEAKING AS a Birmingham school teacher, Mr. J. Jay Myers, 1558 Washington, makes this statement: "Indispensable! To a teacher the library is a necessity. It is a source of enrichment for our students who are able to do more than the average student.

Man Expresses Appreciation For Articles

To the Editor:
On behalf of Troy schools I should like to express appreciation to your newspaper, along with the other 8 papers which cover Troy news in varying degrees, for helping us get important facts and information to the people during the period leading up to our March millage election.

I'm sure that the papers were highly important in getting the record turnout of 2309 voters and the decisive margin of 8 to 5 in favor of the millage requested.

The total vote this time was 430 more than in our October 1958 election, and almost 1,000 more than in our September, 1958 election.

SINCE THE "NO" vote stayed almost constant in the 3 elections (769 in September, 932 in October and 870 in March) the increased participation of the people provided the margin for success.

We also wish to thank the citizens school millage committee, REX B. SMITH, Superintendent Troy Schools.

POTTER Moving & Storage Co.

How does a newspaper editor look at the library? Mr. George R. Averill, 569 Rivensack, editor of the Birmingham Eclectic states: "As a newspaper editor, and as a citizen of our community, I view our public library as a repository of much of the published knowledge and history about our world, including mankind.

"I CAN, and do, use the library's various services to refresh my memory, to acquire new knowledge, and to seek from its preserved wisdom many values that can enrich my own life. Public libraries complement, invaluable, all the other cultural tools that offer aid to mankind in its ever-lasting struggle to reach the promised land called Utopia."

Finally, Mrs. Cassius L. Miller, 593 Pilgrim road, Birmingham, recently re-elected member of the Baldwin Public Library Board, says:

"LIKE MANY people, I have always taken a good public library for granted. Now that I have served on the library board for a number of years, I realize that hard work on the part of the staff, good planning by the board, and understanding support from the public are all quite necessary to provide a community with the quality of services it should have."
