Directory Marks Rise and Fall In Birmingham

R. L. Polk & Co. has just delivered to subscribers their 1959 Birmingham city directory, which includes one entirely new feature. It is a substantial volume bound in mustard and maroon, listing, according to the publishers' records, 24,102 personal and business names in Birmingham, Bloomfield Hills and vicinity, making it the largest city directory the area has ever had. For the first time, the telephone numbers are shown after the names of householders in the street section.

THE POLK people counted them p and stated that the directory rea now has 325 distinctive cateories of enterprise, which they atalog alphabetically from "the tractors" to "Yarns" in the classitractors to led pages.

The Birmingham city directory s not a stay-at-home, the pub-the area has ever had. For the first time, the telephone numbers are shown after the names of householders in the street section.

A city directory may atrike the later of the street section.

A city directory may atrike the average citizen as a dull, matter of fact compendium. Really humor, tragedy and romance fit across in the street tragedy and the street traged and the street traged for manipulation of the large traged for many the street traged for wealth, fame and social position.

Eighteen was continued as the minimum listing age in the free considers the combined names of man and wife as only one name, the publishers attack-tures of the support of the street the street traged for the street the publishers at the publishers at the publishers at the support of the street that the street the street the street the street that the street
