Santa Was Treating

LATHRUP—Young Amy Adams did what comes naturally—she put her candy cane in her mouth—when Santa Claus presented it to her at Lathrup school recently. Amy and her sister Lynn (right) were among the hundreds of youngsters who marched into the school to shake hands with Santa after he helicoptered into Lathrup Village at the annual tree-lighting ceremony. The girls are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen J. Adams, 18169 Dolores, Lathrup.

Bargain-Hunting Administrator Finds Hot Deal

LATHRUP—Thanks to a timely purchase of federal surplus property by City Administrator Jerald D. James, Lathrup's DPW may not be the most stylish, but it will be the warmest in the city this winter.

A recent trip to Jackson garnered fur-edged parkas for cold outdoor work at $2.50 each for city employees and warm gloves for five cents a pair. The parkas, according to Stone, will be available for police, and civil defense work. Among other items available to the city were record binders at five cents each, rope at ¼ cents a foot, blankets at 50 cents each and an office desk at $20.
