Area Students Participate in

Science Day Two Birmingham high school students yesterday participated in the third national Science Youth Day program sponsored by the Thomas Alva Edison Foundation and the Engineering Society of Detroit.

Gary Ludwig and Clayton Lewis were among 150 outstanding soph-omore science students from 77 Detroit area high schools who took part in the observance.

FOLLOWING the tours, the

FOLLOWING the tours, the companies transported each group to Greenfield Village for a lunch-ton and heard Dr. Michael Ference, Jr., director of the Port scientific laboratory, describe different types of research going on in the world today.

The highlight of the program was a visit to Edison's laboratory and demonstrations of several of his early inventions.

Walker L. Cialer, Detroit Edison president, was chairman of the national celebration, which is designed to introduce attudents to the opportunities in science and engineering.
