Melodie Brown, Phil Brown and Marge Stettbacher concentrate on "Quartette No. 1" by R. M. Endresen during a practice session before their performance. Charles Fierz (not pictured) completed the quartet. More than 1,700 events were open to high school students. Thirty-two BHS students entered in 22 of the events. The judging was done by college music instructors.

Kingswood Column

Last week Kingswood's senior glee club began practicing for its annual operetta, which is always given with the Cranbrook glee club. This year it is Cranbrook's turn to be host; so the operetta will be given in Cranbrook's small gymnasium. The joint glee clubs will present "Carousel". Leads for this well known musical were announced last week, and now both singing and dancing rehearsals are well under way. The show will be presented on March 5 and 7.

Friday, February 6, was the deadline for entries to the Acorn contest. The Acorn is Kingswood's literary magazine which will be published at the end of the year. Prizes will be presented to each grade division for the best literary works, and these, along with many other entries, will appear in the magazine.

The ninth grade carried out their American Field Service project on Friday during the assembly period. They sold tickets to "Name That Flirt", each ticket having a number. Numbers were called after each record, and the girl with the number called had a chance to identify the record. Everyone had a good time making money for next year's foreign student.

Also on February 6 was Kingswood's mid-winter formal, which was this year changed to a tea dance from 5:30 to 8:30. The general chairman of the dance was Sue Sutherland, who saw that everything ran smoothly and arranged for Danny Baker and his band for the evening. Virginia Cross and her committee were in charge of invitations. Rosa Classco and others arranged for a supper of everything from roast beef and shrimp casserole to Kingswood's specials, (which was served throughout the evening.)

The elaborate ideas for decorations came from Linda Horace and her assistants. The Kingswood auditorium and dining room were lined with gaily decorated tables, and in the passageway between the two rooms was an unusual fountain made of many different flowers and plants. The effective decorations and the new idea of a tea dance seemed to make the evening both interesting and successful.

Kingswood was represented on Saturday by five juniors, who appeared on television to contest against Grosse Pointe University School on "Quiz 'Em On The Air". Joan Akers, Barbara Cripps, Sue Hapke, and Marion Mercer were the Kingswood panel, and Sara Bartholomew appeared as the alternate.

The panel members answered questions pertaining to articles which had appeared in the Detroit News during the past week. Since Kingswood and G.P.U.s. tied, both teams having missed only one question, a tie-breaker question was asked, which resulted in a victory for G.P.U.s. This was the first time that Kingswood had appeared on the show, and the girls all benefited by the experience.
