

Southfield High Referee Lauds S'field

One of the referees in the Christmas basketball tourney was so pleased with the fine sportsmanship of the Southfield players and spectators that he wrote a letter to Principal Robert Hall complimenting him and Southfield students.

Steve Marshall tells us he has been published in a national magazine this month. Steve and Leo Mueller had a "Mad" adventure with a bear in the Great Smokies last fall when Leo threw Steve's copy of Mad Magazine over his shoulder and a bear came out of the bushes and walked off with it. Steve wrote up the story. The magazine published it in their January issue.

Students Tackle Term Papers at Bloomfield High

Bloomfield Hills high school students are keeping the library staff busy these days. It's term paper time and reference books are at a premium. Junior Holly Freda (left) checks out volumes of volumes for junior Nancy Sharp, who is preparing to compose 1,500 to 2,000 words on her topic, "The Monroe Doctrine." Holly has been concentrating on "The Growth of Labor Unions."

A roar of laughter echoed down the main hall when senior Dick Durbin (left) found out that Myron Molotky (right center) had picked the same term paper subject to write about. "Just what made you think of Louis Armstrong too?" he later quizzed.

The exchange proofreading program among students is a popular pastime during term paper time. Larry Bock winces as Bonnie Nyquist pencils his manuscript, jotting down a few suggestions to give it a more polished appearance. In a few weeks these and other young writers will put away their pens and begin cramming for exams.

"Oh no! Not again!" screams Jack Kelchner as he rips out another sheet of term paper typographical mistakes. He knows he can write but isn't sure about his typing. With his project deadlines nearing, Jack emphatically proclaims that the important factor in term papers is "brevity."

Holy Name CYO Whips Redford St. Mary, 20-17

CAROL ANN JURICA

In a thrilling game, Jan. 4, Holy Name's C.Y.O. basketball team for high school boys beat St. Mary's of Redford, 20-17. Tom O'Connor, Holy Name guard was high scorer with 9 points. Holy Name's record stands at 3 wins and 1 loss. The team is coached by Karl Fremuth.

In their first game this season, Holy Name school's varsity, the Hurricanes, swamped St. Benedict's of Pontiac 33-15. High scorer for the game was Dave Walter with 14 points.

Phil Stenger, Holy Name letterman, was recently elected captain of the Hurricanes. Phil has been playing basketball for four years and is now in the eighth grade. He has proved himself a good athlete and a good sport on the gridiron and the basketball diamond as well as on the basketball court. Holy Name will certainly lose a great athlete when Phil graduates this year to go on into bigger things.

The eighth grades at Holy Name are in a busy hum as the high school entrance exams approach. Any boys who wish to enter U. D. high school next fall are studying up on their math because of the fast-approaching exams. Registrations took place at Holy Name between 2 and 5 p.m. yesterday; for the girls who want to enter Marian high, the new girl's high school being built on Lascher and 14 mile roads. Several other high schools are planning their entrance tests, also.

A pep rally was held in the school gym Friday. It consisted of a short program introducing the newly elected captains of the girls and boys' basketball teams, Mary Flais and Phil Stenger. This was followed by some cheers led by the cheerleading squads. Grades 6-8 were present.
