Sees No Need For Central Sewer System

To the Editor:

You are to be thanked for your article on the pending high taxes in Bloomfield Township at the top of Page 1-E of the June 25 Eccentric.

However, in publishing the statement " . . . the township was going to have to establish an effective central sewage system. For in that year the state department of water resources found the township guilty of stream pollution," you have committed the logical fallacy of assuming that a central sewage system is the only solution to pollution.

Authorities from other states than Michigan, including the State of New York, agree that septic tanks and drain fields can dispose of sewage more than adequately when the population density is not above one family per acre even when the soil is such as we have.

THEREFORE one is forced to conclude that a central sewage system is not needed for most of the township and that it is being forced on us only because someone in the government "wants" it.

The sewer situation is as though we had a dog that smelled. Any logical person would wash the dog, perhaps checking with a veterinary to see whether washing would do any good. (In the case of our sewerage the authorities will answer in the affirmative.) But we are forbidden to wash the dog; we are told we must get rid of the dog and buy a new one.

TO HAVE THE government force these "improvements" may seriously alter the complexion of this area. Sewage, water, paved streets, and curbs and sidewalks are all luxuries that we have chosen to forgo in order to have more land on which our children can play.

The expense of such things may force us to divide our lots and replicate the center of Detroit.
